DENTIST IS ACCUSED BY WIDOW

Says Los Angeles Man Held Her Up in Boston Hotel and Took $15,000 in Gems

Mrs. Madge E. Wilbur, a well-to-do Boston widow, testified here today that Dr. Joseph Homer, a Los Angeles dentist, forced her into his room at the Hotel Maryland at Pasadena, Cal., and made her sign a letter to a clergyman saying that she and the dentist "had sinned for love."

This testimony was one of the vivid features of Mrs. Wilbur's own story on the stand as the opening witness in the trial of Dr. Homer on a charge of robbing Mrs. Wilbur of $15,000 worth of jewels on "Joffre Day" in Boston.

Assistant District Attorney Gallagher, in outlining the case to Judge Lawton and the jury in the Superior Criminal Court, said he would show that Dr. Homer held Mrs. Wilbur at the point of a revolver in his room at the Hotel Touraine and compelled her to telephone her maid at the Copley-Plaza Hotel to bring him the jewels, which he afterwards appropriated.

In her own story Mrs. Wilbur declared that at different times Dr. Homer knocked her down, called her vile names, choked her, threw her on a bed, slapped her "time after time," tore her dress to pieces in one struggle, made her nose bleed, and even made her sign a power of attorney in his favor and a will giving him all her property.

Mrs. Wilbur of this city had Dr.

HUN AVALANCHE HALTED ON OISE; FRENCH GAIN

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

With the stopping of the German drive on the front between Montdidier and the Oise River, where the latest German offensive was opened on Sunday, a tremendous new battle blazed up today on the northern end of the Aisne-Marne line.

The Germans began attacking over a fourteen-mile front from Soissons to Villers-Cotterets and violent fighting is raging around Dommiers, Cutry and Ambleny.

In the meantime the German Crown Prince has not relaxed his pressure on the Montdidier-Oise sector, but has kept up an uninterrupted series of assaults along both flanks of the line and upon the centre.

The situation in this zone of combat may be summarized as follows:

Left flank—The French have made further gains east of Mery and in the sector of Genlis wood. Terrific efforts by the Germans to recapture ground the French took from them yesterday were all repulsed with heavy losses.

The centre—The Germans employed powerful forces in an endeavor to throw the French back upon the Aronde River, but all of the thrusts broke down under the French fire and stout hearted resistance of General Foch's veterans.

Right wing—German forces that had crossed to the southern bank of the Matz River, five miles north of Compiegne, tried vainly to advance from the southern bank, but were thrown back repeatedly to their old positions.

All indications today were that the Germans have been definitely stopped by the armies defending Paris, although they may be able to achieve further local gains.

The French have continued to concentrate their heaviest pressure against the western side of the Germany salient, massing their attacks over a seven-mile front lying southeast from Rubescourt, two and one-half miles south of Montdidier.

Americans have played an important part in the recent fighting. On the southern end of the Picardy front American artillery aided the French in preparation for a counter attack against the Germans southwest of Montdidier.

On the Marne front United States marines have again distinguished themselves by storming Belleau wood, northwest of Chateau Thierry, capturing 300 prisoners, some cannon and machine guns.

There have been minor operations upon the Flanders front.

FRENCH SMASH ALL GERMAN ATTACKS AND MAKE FRESH PROGRESS

ENORMOUS LOSS INFLICTED ON HUNS, WHO ASSAULT IN MASS FORMATION

This was the eighty-fourth day of the German grand offensive and the fourth day of the new drive south of Noyon and Montdidier.

Enormous Losses by Huns From French Fire

Paris, June 12.—During Tuesday evening and last night the Germans delivered attacks along the left wing of the Montdidier-Oise battlefront, but all were broken up, the French War Office announced today. The battle continues along the entire front.

East of Mery and Senlis wood the French extended their gains, making fresh progress.

(Both of these points are on the left flank of the fighting zone.)

The Germans again attempted to force the French back on the centre along the line north of the Aronde River. In spite of the heavy forces employed and the violence of the assaults, the Germans were completely repulsed. They lost enormous numbers of men.

The Germans holding the line of the Mats River made ineffectual efforts to advance from the southern bank, but were repulsed. The attacks were made in mass formation.

German prisoners captured were identified as belonging to four different divisions.

A tremendous battle is in progress on the line of Dommieres, Cutry and south of Ambleny, on the Aisne-Marne battlefield.

The text of the communique follows:

"The battle between Montdidier and the Oise River continued during the night without any decisive change.

"On our left all the enemy's attacks against the positions we took from him yesterday were repulsed.

"East of Mery and in the sector of Genlis wood we made fresh progress.

"On the front north of Barondo, heavy German assaults were smashed at St. Maur and in the sectors of the Loge farm and Antheuil.

"The French maintained all their positions, inflicting enormous losses upon the enemy.

"On the right the Germans tried to advance along the southern bank of the Mats River.

"The French are holding a line south of Chevincourt and Marest-Sur-Mats (in the sector of the Mats valley).

"Additional details show that our counter attacks yesterday were undertaken at a time when the Germans were preparing to assault in the same district. The French collided with strong forces of the enemy, but threw him back.

"Prisoners taken by the French were identified as belonging to four different German divisions.

"South of the Aisne a new German attack developed this morning between the river and Villers-Cotterets. A tremendous battle is raging on the line of Dommiers and Cutry and south of Ambleny."

This Hun tank carried a cannon of 57mm. on front and two machine guns on each side. It was turned over by the force of an explosion from aFrench shell near a quarry at Montdidier on the Aisne front.

YANKEES DRIVE OFF SUPERIOR HUN FORCES

Camouflaged Boche Airplanes Making Machine Gun Raids on Our Infantry

By BERT FORD.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in Picardy, June 11 (6 p. m.).—American artillery on the Picardy front aided with a harassing fire a French counter-attack against the Germans west of Montdidier early this morning. The latest German drive is still raging on the right of the American sector. Our troops are not engaged, but are on the alert.

The men are now rested after the Cantigny battle and are impatient to assist the French. The artillery duelling is terrific and the cannonading is increasing.

The Germans sent two raiding parties against our lines independent of the offensive against the French.

A lieutenant and forty Germans charged our posts of the first line, using grenades, but they were driven off after a sharp duel in which the Americans used their automatics to good effect.

AMERICANS REPULSE FOE.

A second attempt was made later when the Germans tried to "mop up" a trench. They failed, due to the pluck of our men, although the Americans were outnumbered.

At the height of the fighting between the French and Germans enemy aviators flew low over opposing lines. One Boche plane disguised as a French machine flew five hundred yards over our troops, dropping bombs and attacking with machine gun fire units of infantry on the march. The doughboys sought cover. The performance was a bold one. Seeing the French insignia on the wings of the airplane the anti-aircraft gunners dared not shoot.

The Goths came purring from behind a white cloud bank into the dazzling sunshine and swooped so low that every one wondered as to its object. It shaped its course along the road on which American infantry was pressing forward in single file and its machine gun began to fire.

THE BOCHE ESCAPES.

An aged French woman who was washing clothes near her lettuce bed took shelter in a stable. With the naked eye we could see a Boche airman release bombs. With the first crackle of the machine guns our high angle guns broke loose. As they got into action the Boche machine started to climb and escaped.

The attack followed two previous trips in the afternoon of the same German was mistaken for a French plane. Boche aviators have resorted to this subterfuge numerous times since our men captured Cantigny.

"HOW THE U. S. PROTECTS ITS ENLISTED MEN"

"How the United States Protects Enlisted Men" is the topic of an address to be given to draftees by Battalion Sergeant Major Leo A. Splaine of the War Risk Insurance Department of the Northeast at the Chelsea Armory tomorrow evening.

Analysis of the War Situation Today

Increasing vigor of the French counter-attacks comes as an encouraging sign in the appalling conflict now at its crisis in the Champagne region of France.

Without making light of the fact that the Germans have succeeded in launching south on the right of the Champagne front until they have spread down the west bank of the Oise River to Ribecourt, they are more than meeting their match on the western or left end of the present action.

Foch swung two powerful blows on the Huns along a front of between seven and eight miles, between Rubescourt and St. Maur. His indomitable troops, supported by tanks, forced the Germans back. The French counter-attack gained ground at some points for a depth of two miles. The Germans lost more than 1,000 prisoners and several guns.

HUNS SEEK TO CUT RAILROAD.

The Germans are trying, in their efforts to shove forward on the stretch from Rubescourt to St. Maur, to advance toward Estrees-St. Denis, a railroad junction on the branch road running from Compiegne westward to Estrees-St. Denis and thence north to Montdidier.

Estrees-St. Denis is also on a loop road which runs northwest to St. Just and westward to Clermont.

In the centre the Germans, bringing fresh troops into the fight, crushed the French back as far as the valley of the Aronde River. But the French reserves, counter attacking here and again supported by tanks, drove the enemy back.

The situation on the right is more serious for two chief reasons. The German advance down the west bank of the Oise to Ribecourt places them about eight miles upstream from Compiegne, their immediate objective in this drive.

CREATES NEW SALIENTS.

This has brought the German front along the west bank of the Oise to a square corner, resting on the river and creating a new French salient on the east bank of the river.

The Germans may lunge forward now east of Noyon and the Oise in an effort to pinch the allied force in the triangle formed by the Oise on the west, the Aisne on the south and the Noyon-Soissons battle line on the north and east. This triangle is about twelve miles deep from the Noyon sector down to the Aisne, and about 20 miles long, from its base on the Oise eastward to Soissons.

In the Marne drive the Germans were unable to bend forward the line from Soissons up to Noyon so they shifted to the present assault southward from Noyon over to Montdidier. The Oise bisects the general front from Soissons to Montdidier. Having hammered their way, at fearful cost, along part of the western half of this bisection, they may try to equalize their front now by smashing at the eastern half, between Soissons and the Aisne.

MARINES "CLEAN UP" JOB.

Americans take renewed pride in the news of the capture of Belleau Wood, northwest of Chateau-Thierry, and of 300 prisoners by American forces. It is in this same territory that our marines have been fighting for several days. The Huns had strong positions in Belleau Woods. Dispatches early in the week reported progress of the marines until the Germans had been forced up to the northern part of the woods. The latest report shows that our men "cleaned up" the job.

Mother Was Showing Gift from Boy When News of Death Came

Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay of No. 69 Lowell street, West End, received a telegram from the War Department yesterday informing them that their son, John F. Lindsay, had died from wounds received while fighting with the American army in France.

A short time before the arrival of the telegram, the parents had received a letter from their son telling them of the great fighting the American boys were doing, and how well he was getting along. A few days ago Mrs. Lindsay received a box of handkerchiefs from her son which he had received from a French woman visiting the trenches; she was showing the gift to some of her neighbors when the news of her son's death arrived.

Private Lindsay was born in the West End, Boston, and was 23 years old. He was employed as an optician but gave up his work and enlisted with a Massachusetts regiment June 7, 1917, and after spending a time at Camp McGuinness, Framingham, embarked for France. He was very popular in his neighborhood, being the manager of the West End ball club and was a well known amateur boxer.

Private Peter W. McCraw, a member of Company A, 102d Machine Gun Battalion, whose death from wounds in France on June 2 is announced, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. McCraw of No. 47 Bradwood street, Roslindale. He would have been 20 years old this month. He was born in Roxbury and educated in the Longfellow grammar school, Roslindale, and in Mechanic Arts High School. He later entered the counting room of the Boston Transcript and enlisted last August in the Massachusetts cavalry, troop A, which later became the machine gun battalion.

GERMAN LOSSES DESCRIBED AS 'FANTASTIC'

Huns Living Up to Boast That They Would Waste 1,500,000 to Reach Paris

By ERNEST P. ORR,

Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, June 12.—The losses the Germans are suffering in the present drive are described by correspondents at the front as almost fantastic. The Germans are living up to their boast that they would waste 1,500,000 men to reach Paris.

Constantly fresh divisions, called up from all parts of the western front, are thrown into the battle. The Teuton advance is most serious below Ribecourt, where the Germans are exchanging mounds of dead for bits of French soil.

The Paris military critics believe the German aim is a vast encirclement of the forests of Compiegne and Villers-Cotterets and to reach the Circl-Senlish-Meaux line in order to bombard Paris.

The enemy's masses are densest between Bethancourt and Vignemont, converging in the direction of Compiegne.

The French press emphasizes that the Amiens offensive was launched on a sixty-mile front, the later drive toward the Marne on a thirty-mile line, while the present push is only on a twenty-mile front.

Marcel Matin, the military critic, writes:

"Two fresh divisions of Prussian guard and two of Crown Prince Rupprecht's Bavarian divisions have had to be withdrawn because of the heavy losses."

The Echo de Paris says:

"The Germans have thrown their whole strength into the present struggle, counting upon ending the war by the end of the month. We must not be surprised if the enemy now also throws his naval strength into the struggle simultaneously with a great attack on the British front."

FORMER NEWSPAPER MAN OF BOSTON WOUNDED

Paris, June 12.—In the fighting on the Marne, Arthur J. Phillips, a former Boston newspaper man, a stretcher man at Chateau Thierry, received a shrapnel wound in the arm. Charles Sayre of Lancaster, Pa., and George H. Douglas of Georgia, both Y. M. C. A. workers and stretcher bearers suffered shell shock.

PROGRESS IN TREATMENT OF WOUNDED SOLDIERS

Washington, June 12.—Surgery and scientific treatment of wounded soldiers has progressed to such an extent that more than 95 per cent. of the wounded, who originally remained at the military hospitals for months, are now cured and returned to the forces in three or four weeks, Surgeon-General Gorgas announced today.

U-BOAT RAIDER SINKS BRITISH TRANSPORT

An Atlantic Port, June 12.—The Ausonia, a British transport, owned by the Cunard Steamship Line, was sunk by a U-boat torpedo while on her western trip, according to private cable dispatches received here.

Ninety of her crew of 139 officers and men were rescued by an eastbound steamer and landed on the British coast. Search is being made for the forty missing.

The Ausonia had her stern blown off by a torpedo in June, 1917, but reached port. She was of steel, 450.6 feet long, of 8,153 gross tons, and had a speed of fourteen knots.

Washington, June 12.—Practical methods which drove the German submarines far out to sea from the coasts of Great Britain and France are being put into effect by the Navy Department on this side of the Atlantic, to protect the many ships reported made at the Post-Graduate Hospital today.

While there was a growing belief that some at least of the submarines which have been destroying American shipping have left for their home bases, officials generally were convinced today that the general menace will be with us until after the war. The steps already taken, and the precautions now being put into effect are expected to reduce losses to the minimum.

There was no additional word of further victims of the submarines today. The Navy Department is in receipt of reports from the chasers operating all along the coast, but the War Risk Insurance Department of a character which cannot be made public at this time.

U. S. TROOPS CAPTURE 350 GERMANS

With the United States Army at the Marne, June 12.—A battalion of United States marines has captured the northern half of Belleau wood (northwest of Chateau-Thierry) taking 350 Prussian and Saxon soldiers, including ten officers and two Krupp field guns of three-inch calibre, several huge minenwerfers and a number of machine guns.

The attack was delivered after two days' preliminary bombardment, in which the allied artillery made the shell-scarred woods an inferno for the Germans resting there.

The furious assaults of the American marines found the German stunned and reeling, ready to surrender.

The Yankee machine gunners inflicted the heaviest casualties upon the enemy. Owing to the excellent artillery preparation and the swiftness of the operation, the United States casualties were light.

The Germans launched an attack on Bourescbes, but the assault was smashed by the machine gunners of the United States machine gunners, and the accuracy of the artillery.

Belleau wood lies in the Chateau Thierry sector, just to the west of the village of Bourescbes and south of the village of Belleau.

It is in this region that the American marines have been fighting so valiantly recently, and much praise was bestowed upon them for their drive of the Germans through the Belleau wood, which has been considered an almost impregnable position by the Germans.

THE only difference between these discontinued patterns of American-made Rugs and regular stocks is PRICE. They are as good as any, in almost endless assortment of sizes and patterns, yet—

WE ARE OFFERING THEM AT DECIDED DISCOUNTS FROM PRICES THAT WITHIN A WEEK WILL BE MUCH HIGHER AT WHOLESALE.

One of the policies of this house—in effect for a century—is to take no advantage of prospective market prices. Such advantage goes to our patrons. This is distinctly one of those occasions.

BANKER'S WIFE CHARGES ATTEMPT TO RAILROAD HER TO ASYLUM

MRS. THORNE IS SET AT LIBERTY BY ORDER OF NEW YORK COURT

By International News Service.

New York, June 12.—Taken to Bellevue Hospital on June 5 under the impression that she was being inducted into a rest cure establishment, hurried to the psycopathic ward, stripped of her clothing and furnished only with a coarse muslin shirt, according to her testimony before Supreme Court Justice Geigerich, Mrs. Mary Casey Thorne, wife of Joel Wolfe Thorne, millionaire banker, secured her freedom.

"I was put into a straitjacket," she told the court. "I didn't remain in the straitjacket long, however. I took it off myself in about three hours, and they never put it back on me again.

UNABLE TO REACH FRIENDS.

"I was denied the privilege of communicating with relatives or friends or lawyers."

"I do not think this young woman should be detained," said the court. "She is discharged."

Mrs. Thorne was brought to court under habeas corpus proceedings instituted by her counsel, Mirabeau L. Towne and Randolph A. Gerard.

She declared her husband disappeared from their home following a birthday party for his three-year-old son and that she has not seen him since.

She applied to Dr. Seth M. Milliken for a tonic, she said, and he first took her to a place which refused to receive her as she was in "full possession of her mental faculties."

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

"Then Dr. Milliken took me to Bellevue in his automobile, telling me he was visiting surgeon here and I would receive the best of treatment," she said.

Dr. Theron J. Vosburgh, assistant superintendent of the hospital, declared on the witness stand that Mrs. Thorne had been taken to the hospital in one of the psycopathic ambulances.

He admitted giving the order that she be permitted to communicate with no one, claiming her mother, Mrs. Casey, had requested it. He produced a statement made in the hospital June 6, he said, by Joel W. Thorne.

"What! My husband in the hospital when I was there, and I didn't know of it!" exclaimed Mrs. Thorne. "This is terrible!"

TELLS OF THREATS.

In the statements, said to have been made by Thorne, claim was made that Mrs. Thorne had threatened to shoot her husband, and on one occasion had chased him with an ice pick. Several friends had declared she suffered from mental trouble, Dr. Vosburgh said Thorne told him.

"That's a lie!" cried Mrs. Thorne, when hospital records were read that declared that she indulged excessively in alcoholic drinks.

"Do you drink alcoholic liquors?" gently inquired the court.

"Absolutely not at all, except an occasional bottle of stout with a meal," she replied.

Dr. Vosburg testified that Mrs. Thorne suffered from "a mild form of depressive insanity, characterized in that particular type by over-activeness, of the lightness and lack of judgment."

"There will be a very thorough investigation of all this," said Lawyer Towne after his client had been discharged. "One of the next steps will be the filing of a $1,000,000 damage suit against one of the central figures in it."

COOLER, BEFORE WE GET SUMMER, SAYS OLD PROB

Keep a stiff upper lip, Bostonians, you who awoke last night shivering and drew up the extra blankets, for the Weather Man says it's going to be cooler yet before this "spell o' weather" is over. Better get the trusty down puff for tonight, and have the hot water bottle handy if you are liable to chills, for "Summer has not came" as yet, by a long shot the fact we are drawing close to the longest day of the year. However it is going to be fair, according to the prophets. The lowest temperature in the country at 8 a. m. today was at Greenville, Me., which registered 44 degrees; and the highest at Galveston, Tex., 78 degrees. Boston's thermometer, at 61, was the highest in New England.

WOMAN, 58, SUES MAN, 70, FOR $50,000

Sarah Maraden of Roxbury Alleges Meek Broke Promise to Marry Her

Trial was begun before Judge Mel Laughlin and a jury in the Sixth Session of the Superior Court, on the $50,000 suit brought by Sarah Maraden of No. 2320 Washington street, Roxbury, against William Todd Meek of Atlantic, for alleged breach of promise. The plaintiff is fifty-eight years of age, and Meek about seventy.

William J. Patron, counsel for the plaintiff, called Meek as his first witness. The latter testified that he was head bookkeeper at the Youth's Companion Publishing Company, and that he first met Sarah Maraden at Leeds, England. This was about forty-five years ago, he said, and since that time he had not met her but once. He denied any engagement of marriage, or that he had written to her at all.

Patron then showed Meek a photograph and asked if it were not a good likeness of him many years ago. At first Meek was inclined to the opinion that it was not his photograph, but that of his brother, but on close inspection admitted that it was a likeness of himself.

On the back of the photograph was written, "Miss Sarah Maraden, from her friend, W. T. M., No. 81 Broadway, South Boston. Please forward me one of your photographs as soon as possible."

The plaintiff said that after arriving in America from England, she lived at Meek's house for about three months. From there she went out to work as a domestic and later became a nurse.

During all the time she had been in this country she said she met him twice each week. In May or June, 1904, she claims, he promised to marry her.

Mr. Clifford crawled on his stomach through a shell field through heavy fire, pushing a stretcher just ahead of him. A shell burst near him rendering him unconscious. A fragment penetrated his pack, which saved the minister's life.

34 GIRLS, TAKEN BY THE POLICE, FACE COURT

All Found Guilty After Campaign to Safeguard Soldiers and Sailors

Boston's campaign to clean its streets of women sirens bore fruit before Judge Duff in Municipal Court today when thirty-four women and girls were found guilty and either sentenced to women's reformatories or put on probation.

The defendants, more or less of a motley assemblage, presented a sorrowful picture in the prisoners' pen. Among them were old offenders to whom the pen was an old visiting place.

Many, however, with the flush of youth on their cheeks, gave evidence of regret. These Judge Duff remanded to the probation officers for another chance.

The women were rounded up by the provost guard and the police for preying on soldiers and sailors. The crusade followed recent declarations by prominent churchmen. The crusade will be continued until Boston's streets are morally safe for its country's defenders.

WILSON KILLS OPEN DEBATE OF TREATIES

Senate Acts When He Announces Policy Is Only to Publish Pacts Consummated

By International News Service.

Washington, June 12.—The Senate went on record this afternoon against open diplomacy as proposed in the Borah amendment. It rejected the amendment by a vote of 50 to 23, following receipt of a letter showing President Wilson flatly opposed to the measure.

Republican Senators who supported the Borah amendment were:

Baird, Borah, Cummins, Fall, France, Frelinghuysen, Gronna, Johnson of California, Jones of Washington, Kellogg, Kenyon, Lenroot, McNary, New, Norris, Sherman, Smith of Michigan, Sterling and Townsend.

Republican Senators who voted for the amendment were: Chamberlain, Gore, Johnson of South Dakota, Nugent and Vardaman.

President Wilson made his position clear in a letter to Secretary of State Lansing on March 12 and made public this afternoon by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Hitchcock read the President's letter in the Senate immediately after it convened.

The President declared that this was not the time to adopt such a measure. He insisted that when he declared for open diplomacy he did not mean that there should be no private discussions, but that no secret agreements should be entered into.

The text of the President's letter follows:

"I wish you would be kind enough to formulate a careful and conclusive memorandum for the use of the committee of the Senate with regard to the enclosed resolution. I take it for granted that you feel as I do, that this is no time to act as the resolution prescribes, and certainly when I pronounced for open diplomacy. I meant not that there should be no private discussions of delicate matters, but that no secret agreements of any sort should be entered into and that all international relations, when they should be open, should be frank and explicit."

Cobb of Boston Tells Gotham: Go to Bed at Ten Thirty!

New York isn't so much.

In fact, Boston comes pretty near running the big town, and a Boston man, John Candler Cobb of No. 66 State street and Milton, is telling the metropolis at what hour it shall go to bed o' nights.

Ten thirty, Mr. Cobb thinks, is about the right time for Lobster Alley to dim its bright lights and for New York to hit the pad. His wife New York so, in a screed of three typewritten pages, starting with the astonishing discovery that "the New York city transportation is unsatisfactory and complicated."

Therefore, to better transportation, he wants everyone under cover early, so that "two million tons of coal can be saved to carry two million soldiers to France."

Quitting out street car service entirely in New York enough coal might be saved to transport the entire population of America to France, but he does not develop his researches that far.

Mr. Cobb is a director of the New York Railways Company.

MRS. ANDERSON IS MADE DOCTOR OF LETTERS

First Woman Thus Honored by Washington University in Its Nearly 100 Years

Washington, June 12.—Mrs. Lars Anderson, formerly Isabel Perkins, daughter of the late Commodore George Perkins, U. S. N.* has been awarded the honorary degree of doctor of letters by George Washington University "in recognition of her achievements as a writer and the noble work she has done during the war for the wounded and distressed of her own and other nations."

She is the first woman in the history of the university, which was founded nearly 100 years ago, to receive an honorary degree.

Rear Admiral Charles H. Stockton, U. S. N., retired president of the university, made the presentation in the following words:

"Isabel Anderson, authoress, philanthropist, patriotic daughter of a patriotic father. In recognition of your many writings and of your devoted works for those in the service of your country at home and in France, the board of trustees of the George Washington University, by authority given by the laws of the States, have directed me to confer upon you the degree of doctor of letters.

"In order that for the first time in its history of nearly one hundred years honorary degrees to a woman, the board of trustees wishes to recognize the devotion and self-abnegation of the women of America to the cause of humanity and especially in behalf of those engaged in the military service of the nation at this time."

The reference of President Stockton to the services of Mrs. Anderson in France relates to her work there during the last eight months in the canteen and hospital service of the Red Cross.

As a writer Mrs. Anderson has made a name for herself in the world. The latest, "Odd Corners," published in October, consists of a series of travel sketches in various parts of the world. Three large volumes known as the "Spell" series relate to "The Spell of Portugal," "The Spell of the Philippines and Belgium. The last is the result of Belgium before the war, when Mrs. Anderson resided there.

She is now preparing a series of articles dealing with her recent experiences in the military hospitals of France and Belgium.

FREE RIDES FOR ENLISTED MEN FAVORED

Patriotic Society Leaders and Others Indorse Boston American Plan

All New England endorses the suggestion in a recent Boston AMERICAN editorial that our brave boys in khaki and blue be given free rides on street cars. The idea has been approved in nearly every city and town of the six States that comprise the New England group.

Officials of patriotic societies are especially well pleased with the proposed plan of giving United States soldiers and sailors free transportation. It would simply be an extension of a custom which after years of trial has been found all right. Policemen and firemen have ridden free of cost on trolley cars for a long period and few persons have questioned their moral right to do so.

If it is important that the men who protect the public from criminals and fires and who get comparatively good pay for doing so should ride free, why shouldn't the soldier and sailor be added to the list? In the opinion of most of those who have expressed public opinions on the subject there is but one logical answer—they should ride free.

Among the officials of patriotic societies who endorse the idea are Edw. P. Stanley of Manchester, commander of Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., who is doing his utmost to help win the war, and Mrs. Ida Louise Gibbs of Waltham, Regent of Dorothy Brewer Chapter, D. A. R.

Mrs. Brewer strikes a strong note when she says "Is it not better to sacrifice for him (the soldier or sailor) while he is here in the flesh than to put roses on his grave or fire a volley over his body?"

Statements from leading persons follow:

COMMANDER EDWIN P. STANLEY, Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R.

I have read the editorial in the AMERICAN, and heartily coincide with its suggestions. I would like to see everyone who wears a United States uniform, either a soldier or a sailor, ride on street railway cars without payment. Of course, I except commissioned officers. I do not believe that it would hurt the street railways to let all except commissioned officers ride without payment. The street railways would not lose a great deal if they did this.

By THOMAS F. ANDERSON, Secretary New England Shoe and Leather Association.

I believe in the principle of free car rides for our soldiers and sailors. Under proper regulations as to the number who should ride on a car, etc., I approve of the idea. Every loyal citizen believes everything possible should be done for the soldiers and sailors. Of course the Boston Elevated is in a bad way now and it would not do to burden it too heavily.

By MRS. BARRETT WENDELL, President Special Aid Society for American Preparedness.

I don't think it quite fair to the street railway companies to ask them to convey soldiers and sailors free of charge, and from my experience with our enlisted men I think they would prefer to pay for something. United States soldiers and sailors are very proud and do not wish to be the objects of charity. Furthermore the street railways are already overburdened. I think it would be a good idea to permit them to travel at reduced price or for the street railway companies in Hawaii and the Philippines and Belgium. The last is the country in Belgium before the war, when Mrs. Anderson resided there.

She is now preparing a series of articles dealing with her recent experiences in the military hospitals of France and Belgium.

By EDWIN O. CHILDS, Mayor of Newton.

The idea sounds reasonable. We cannot do too much for the men who are going to lay down their lives for our cause.

By THOMAS J. LYONS, Playground Commissioner, City of Boston.

The street railway companies should be willing to do their bit by allowing free transportation to sailors and soldiers, especially in view of the fact that sailors and firemen ride free. The burden would not be a great one. Everything will be gained by the idea to permit them to travel at reduced price or for the street railway companies in Hawaii and the Philippines and Belgium. The last is the country in Belgium before the war, when Mrs. Anderson resided there.

She is now preparing a series of articles dealing with her recent experiences in the military hospitals of France and Belgium.

By MRS. IDA LOUISE GIBBS, Regent of Dorothy Brewer Chapter, D. A. R.

If there is anybody entitled to free transportation it is surely the man who is riding to his death. He is willing to give up everything. The sacrifice is his, ironically enough, is the sailor's. Is it not better to sacrifice for him while he is here in the flesh than to put roses on his grave or fire a volley over his body?

By EDWARD W. QUINN, Mayor of Cambridge.

I am firmly in favor of the Boston AMERICAN'S splendid plan of free rides for the soldier and sailor boys. So many men are giving up their services to their country, sacrificing good positions, loss of salary and the comforts of home to fight for their country, we, the people at home, should help the boys and see that they get all the comforts that can be given them. We should do everything we can for our enlisted men.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION RESUMES

Prohibition and Suffrage for Women Among Points to Be Considered

The Constitutional Convention is in session today.

Any attempt to adjourn the Convention "until after the war" is expected to be voted down by the delegates.

The anti-constitution amenders are said to have "shot their bolt" in the Committee on Rules, where they were defeated by a vote of 25 to 9. The majority of members present at that time were of the opinion that they could best "do their bit" here at home by bringing the antiquated Constitution up to date.

"We can help make democracy safe at home," said Josiah Quincy.

PREDICTS DEFEAT OF MOTION.

Judge Reginald T. FitzRandolph, all the way up from Nantucket to be on time for the call of the roll, predicted that a motion to adjourn the convention would be defeated by a heavier proportion in the convention itself, than in the Committee on Rules.

Four deaths have occurred since the convention came into existence—Former Governor John Q. A. Brackett of Arlington, former Attorney-General Dana Malone of Greenfield, former Representative Walter F. Russell of Brockton and J. Warren Bailey of Somerville, a former member of the Prison Board.

About ten members have gone into the military service of the country. Ten others will be unable to attend. George W. Anderson, recently appointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is included in this group. So also is Thomas J. Boynton, the United States District Attorney, whose duties have greatly increased since the war.

It is said that the convention will not fill the vacancies. One of the members, now in the front-line trenches, is said to have written a letter of protest against any plan to declare his seat vacant.

IMPORTANT AMENDMENTS.

The convention may abolish the Committee of the Whole, a legislative device which permitted of obstruction and delay. This action would shorten the work of the convention. The delegates would be enabled to close their work in three months, some of them say.

During its first session the convention voted to submit four amendments to the people—absentee voting, anti-ald, public trading and the initiative and referendum. Many other important matters are left for consideration. The important contests are expected to be made on these:

To prevent members of the Legislature from accepting pay for serving upon recess committees; State prohibition, woman suffrage, biennial elections, abolition of the Senate, abolition of the Council, and the creation of a cabinet system, more power for the Governor, taxation reform. There are more than 300 proposed amendments to be disposed of by the convention.

Fine Cotton Crop

New Orleans, La., June 12.—Reports from practically every section of the South indicate the yield of cotton will be heavy this season. The staple selling at around 30 cents a pound in the seeding season stimulated planting, notwithstanding the fact that in many localities a plea was made for the planting of more food and feed crops.

Tardieu Asks Welcome For "Blue Devils"

By ANDRE TARDIEU,
French High Commissioner for the United States.

BESPEAK for the Blue Devils who are going to Boston the good will of the people of Massachusetts. They have already received everywhere a most generous reception.

They deserve it on account of the bravery and heroism which all of them have displayed during four years of the hardest warfare.

I doubt not that the people of New England will give these representatives of the French army the same cordial welcome that they have received from all the American cities they have visited, and from which they carry back to France a feeling of warm gratitude.

Have You a Sextant? Sell, Loan or Give It to Uncle Sam

By International News Service.

New York, June 12.—The navy needs sextants, but sextants which require more than minor repairs and adjusting are not wanted.

Those who have sextants to loan or sell to the navy are requested to send them to the branch hydrographic office, No. 78-80 Broad street, New York city, or to communicate with the officer in charge, Commander C. P. Eaton, U. S. N., retired, who has been designated an agent to buy sextants.

RECOMMEND MALDEN MAN FOR SERVICE CROSS

Corporal Raymond F. Sawyer of Waverly street, Malden, formerly with Company L of the Fifth regiment and now with the 101st regiment in France, has been recommended for a distinguished service cross for leading a guard patrol to safety during a gas attack, during which he was obliged to remove part of his gas mask to see and as a result was severely gassed.

BOSTON TO SEE 'BLUE DEVILS' TOMORROW

Battle Scarred French Heroes Will Hold Reception on Boston Common

The "Blue Devils," battle-scarred heroes of France, are coming to Boston tomorrow morning.

They will be with us two days, including Flag Day.

They know no fear. They have looked death squarely in the face and laughed.

They are the picturesque, wild-fighting, Hun-defying chaps over whom New York went wild.

They are the elite of the French Army, or the "Speed Boys," as we would style them, according to M. Guy of the French High Commission.

Every man in the lot coming here, more than 100 of them, wears the Croix de Guerre, the French War Cross.

Most of them bear the scars of five or six wounds apiece.

Their commander, Lieutenant Le Moel, wears the Cross of the Legion of Honor as well as the Croix de Guerre. His five honor stripes stand for as many wounds.

A program in keeping with the condition of the men has been arranged by the Four-Minute Men of the local branch of the Committee on Public Information, which has charge of the hero delegation.

TO MEET GOVERNOR McCALL.

They will meet Governor McCall and the Commander-in-Chief, visit Camp Devens, attend the "pops" band concerts in Faneuil Hall, in the armory of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, at the Chamber of Commerce and on Boston Common, and will march in the big War Savings Stamp parade which ends the day for the final reception Friday night.

Among the interesting things about the "Blue Devils" and their Boston visit is an instruction from Washington regarding their entertainment here. It calls for:

Wine with each meal, but no too great quantity.

Must not march them more than two miles in a day.

Must have at least one meal a day in private.

Daily rest period required.

These instructions will be carefully followed by George H. Crocker and others of the local branch of the Four-Minute Men of the Committee on Public Information.

The instruction for wine is given because these fighters are accustomed to wine at their meals, Joseph G. Flamand, French Consul at this port, tells the local committee that the "Blue Devils" prefer to drink claret, which they mix with water, half-and-half.

They are being sent through the army training camps in the East and Middle West to see for themselves just what America is doing to prepare men to take places beside the "Poilu" of France.

RECEIVED BY MAYOR.

Mayor Peters will personally meet the boys when they arrive at 9:30 tomorrow morning in the South Station. With him will be representatives of the Army, Navy, State Guard Governor's office, adjutant-general's office, a French army officer, consul Flamand, Robert F. Herrick, Matthew Brush and G. H. Bramwell of the War Savings Committee, Joseph G. Chandler of the Four-Minute Men, Victor A. Heath and Alonzo Tont of the Public Safety Committee and other prominent business and professional men.

Immediately upon their arrival the men will be taken in automobiles to the Harvard Club for breakfast. They will establish headquarters at the Westminster Hotel and will be under the personal care of Emile Coulon.

The program arranged for tomorrow and Friday is as follows:

THURSDAY, JUNE 13.

8:30 a. m.—Arrive at South Station on Federal Express.

9 a. m.—Breakfast at Harvard Club.

10 a. m.—Call upon Governor McCall and visit to Constitutional Convention.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, FLAG DAY

11:30 a. m. Committee will meet "Blue Devils" at Westminster Hotel and escort them to Faneuil Hall.

12 M. Reception and speeches at Faneuil Hall.

1 p. m. Luncheon at Ancient's Armory over Faneuil Hall.

2 p. m. Assemble and march to Chamber of Commerce.

2 p. m. Reception and speeches at Chamber of Commerce.

2:15 March with escort to Boston Common.

4:30 to 5:15 p. m. Remain on Common.

5:15 p. m. March to City Club.

5:45 p. m. Dinner at City Club.

7 p. m. Reassemble on Beacon street in front of State House with Consul Flamand and rest of parade. March down Park, Tremont, Boylston, and Huntington avenue to Mechanics Building.

8 p. m. Reception and speeches at Mechanics Building.

"Blue Devils" the Germans called them for their blue uniforms and their desperate courage.

The Boston public will see a pleasant-appearing body of men, ranging from young manhood up to fifty years and more.

CARRY FAMOUS RIFLE.

Their uniforms are of dark blue. They wear black J. P. Stats'—sort of Tam O'Shanter cap—and black spiral puttees. The orange-colored chevrons on the left sleeve denote service. The right-sleeve chevrons are for wounds.

They carry the famous Lebel rifle of the French army. From the left hip hangs the wicked, long, slender bayonet that the "Blue Devil" uses so ferociously.

Notice their gait. It is the "Pas-cadence," a snappy quickstep.

Reports Estate of $54,686

The report of Samuel H. Hudson, who was appointed by the Norfolk Probate Court to appraise the property of the late Arthur L. Spring, shows that the deceased was worth $54,686 in real and personal property.

BUSCH'S WIDOW SEEKS FORTUNE SEIZED BY U. S.

Must Prove Claim That She Is Still an American Citizen

Washington, June 12.—Mrs. Lillie Busch, widow of Adolphus Busch, the St. Louis brewer, will have a rather hard time in regaining possession of her property in this country. This was learned, following publication of a dispatch saying she was due to arrive in Havana, Cuba.

Her part of the estate of her millionaire husband was taken over by A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, as a result of her residence in Germany, where she has been since the beginning of the war.

Whether or not Mrs. Busch will be able to reclaim her property, which is valued at more than a million and a half dollars, will depend upon the ability of her counsel to satisfy the Department of Justice of her United States citizenship and that she has resumed bona fide residence in the United States.

MAY BE RESTORED.

The trading with the enemy act, under which her property was seized, provides that property confiscated by the alien property custodian because of the residence of the owner in an enemy country may be restored to the owner on an order from the Attorney-General stating that the former owner has been before the Department of Justice and given satisfactory proof of United States citizenship and resumption of legal residence in this country.

The question in Mrs. Busch's case will be on whether or not she can convince the Attorney-General that her property should be restored. Although no information on this point was obtainable in the alien property custodian's office it is understood after other inquiries that serious difficulty has been encountered in definitely determining the status of Mrs. Busch's property under the trading with the enemy act.

The other portions of the Busch estate willed to heirs residing in Germany were among the first enemy property taken over. Not until recently, however, was the custodian able to take action with regard to Mrs. Busch's portion.

The management of the Busch estate is said to have claimed persistently that Mrs. Busch was not a resident of Germany and was not, in fact, in that country. She has been reported for the last five months as returning to the United States. One report had her in Spain.

LEGAL TANGLE PRECIPITATED.

Government agents were unable to ascertain her exact whereabouts.

This condition precipitated a legal tangle which until recently prevented the alien property custodian from taking over the property involved. Under the law, the residence of the owner is the deciding factor. When it can be established that the owner is within the enemy lines, all property in this country is taken over.

Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Taft's Cabinet, is executor and trustee of the Busch estate under the brewer's will.

DERU, WHO GAVE QUEEN VIOLIN LESSONS, IS HERE

Denver, Col., June 12.—Edouard Deru, who taught Queen Elizabeth of Belgium to play a violin, is on a visit of the United States in behalf of Belgian war sufferers. He says the Belgian Queen was the most democratic pupil he ever taught. Deru was in Brussels when that city was captured by the Germans. He was made a prisoner and then escaped to Holland. The music master says Queen Elizabeth now spends virtually her entire time among the troops.

COP GAZES AT MAIDEN; MAN RUNS BY SEMAPHORE

Atlanta, Ga., June 12.—"Why, Judge, he wasn't looking at me at all. There was a pretty girl passing and he"——

W. H. Lee was explaining a charge of running past a semaphore in an automobile, passing a street semaphore.

"How about it?" Judge Johnson asked Policeman Hudson, who, being honest, admitted that he was watching a young lady crossing the street.

The case was dismissed.

LYNN GIRLS LEAVE FOR SERVICE ABROAD

Three Lynn girls were numbered among those who have just sailed from an Atlantic Port for overseas service. They are Ina Minson, a cadette C. Couture of No. 143 Hamilton avenue, Pauline Bourseau, Broad street, and Mabel St. Cain of No. 63 Beacon Hill avenue. The first named two will be telephone operators in France, while the third will be assigned as secretary of a Red Cross unit.

"TOM" CARTY'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

EAST TO LOSE FURTHER WAR ORDERS

"Congested District" Working to Full Capacity of Fuel and Railroad Facilities

By International News Service.

Washington, June 12.—The War Industries Board, Fuel Administration and the Railroad Administration have fixed the boundaries of a district to be known as the "congested manufacturing and transportation district."

War contracts to manufacturers in this district will be awarded only with the consent of the three administrations. The new plan will prevent further increase in the volume of war orders and in the number of establishments handling them in the district.

The section held to be working now to the capacity of its fuel and transportation facilities is described as the New England states, eastern and western New York, Pennsylvania as far west as Williamsport and Altoona, all of New Jersey and Delaware and eastern Maryland, except Baltimore.

In explaining the plan, the Fuel Administration issued a statement which said:

"The congested district comprises those Eastern States in which so large a proportion of war industries is located as to make it difficult to supply all with necessary raw material and fuel. This difficulty obtains because coal for those industries is mined in the territory west of the Allegheny Mountains. It must be carried into this congested district by a limited number of railway lines and ships from Hampton roads and Baltimore.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let your sore, swollen, aching feet spread out in a bath of "Tiz."

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.—Advertisement.

Turned to Blotches, Disfigured Face Very Much, Cuticura Completely Healed.

"I broke out in small pimples all over my face and body. They soon turned into blotches that were large, and very red, and disfigured my face very much. They itched and burned and I kept at them so that I irritated the breaking out. I could hardly sleep.

"This trouble lasted three weeks before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I was soon relieved and I used about one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment when my face was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Eva Dusseault, 14 Avery St., Providence, R. I., Nov. 23, 1917.

'NO WOMEN LOAFERS,' SAYS 'PRETTIEST' NAVY GIRL

Miss Mary Warner, attractive yeowoman, who defends fair sex in answering accusation of Dr. Esther Lovejoy of Chicago.

ROBBERS WORK SHREWD GAMES, SO BEWARE

"DON'TS" FOR VISITORS AND SHOPPERS.

Don't display a roll of bills while making a purchase.

Don't make strange acquaintances.

Don't confide in a chance acquaintance.

Don't stand with hands in pockets and coat open.

Don't leave hand bag open while making purchase.

Don't walk with pocket-book swinging at side.

A wave of petty crime is sweeping over the Scollay square and Hanover street districts.

Pickpockets are "faking" street fights, conspiring with pretty girls, resorting to any old encounter that will bring them into close contact with pedestrians, in order to rob the unsuspecting passerby.

Bogus jewelry shops and photograph studios are another dodge to lure in the man with a roll of bills; and bona fide auction rooms also offer opportunity for the professional crook to "frisk" the crowd.

A gang of New York crooks is said to be operating here, and as a result of their activities details of extra police from the uptown stations have been assigned to duty in plain clothes. Members of the vice squads will also arrest all young girls found on the streets unaccompanied.

USED WOMEN AS LURES.

The crooks are known to have netted already a goodly sum from their operations.

By means of pretty young women used as "stalls," traps are laid to lure woodsmen and sailors with large rolls to the streets, where slick-fingered "dips" relieve them of their money.

Foreigners are also "pickings" for the gang, and many men employed on patriotic work in ship yards and munition factories who visit the district for purchases are robbed of their hard earned wages.

Visitors to certain street photograph "studios" who display money are pointed out to the gang by a "stool" and the man is invited to some cafe only to find when he reaches the street that his money has been "lifted."

The round up of girls and pickpockets will clean the district of the undesirable and many of the thieves will be arrested as slackers.

HOW THEY DO IT.

A recent case that came to the attention of the police was in Scollay square, where a young woman approached a man and asked to be directed to a particular street.

The man gave her the direction, when she suddenly screamed and three of her male companions who had been waiting in shadows appeared and asked what had taken place.

"The innocent young girl" told her associates the man had insulted her, and the thieves proceeded to beat the man who had attempted to help the girl, and in the scrimmage his roll, watch and other jewelry were stolen. The crooks made a getaway, but were later arrested.

Yeowomen in the Naval District headquarters of the Little building present Miss Mary Warner as their candidate for honors as the most attractive yeowoman in the service.

Not only is Miss Warner attractive, but she is industrious as well. She credits her excellent health to hard work, and her companions agree that she is one of the busiest young women in the navy, one who never hesitates at the thought of extra work.

When asked today what she thought of the accusation of Dr. Esther Lovejoy of Chicago, who declared women in the United States are inclined to be loafers during the war, she threw up her hands in horror.

WORK KEEPS WOMEN HEALTHY.

"She doesn't know what she's talking about," said Miss Warner with much emphasis.

"If that woman would only come up here and just see what keeps us all healthy and strong, she would never think of calling any woman a loafer these times.

"Why I would be willing to work sixteen hours a day, if I knew by so doing I was helping my country in war time.

"We girls just laughed when we read what this Chicago woman said. She is one of those time-worn women who want to fire at something.

NO PLACE FOR WORRY.

"I generally work eight hours a day. I attribute my good health and strength to doing my work systematically. You know you must have a place for everything. This going around hunting for some paper that you have misplaced takes you into worryland.

"I never worry. I just enjoy working for the government.

"The girls up here often wish they could go to war and do more for their country. But if you knew how much we are doing in the way of getting things straight, you'd feel that we are doing our part in the war."

E. ROLLINS MORSE UNDER SURGEON'S KNIFE

E. Rollins Morse, formerly of this city, was operated on for appendicitis at the Newport Hospital. The operation was performed by Dr. Charles W. Stewart and the patient is reported as resting comfortably.

Mr. and Mrs. Morse have Winter homes in New York and Washington, D. C., and spend the summers at Newport, where their Summer home, Villaresa, is noted for its architectural beauties and fine old-fashioned garden. Although not among the largest of the "cottages" in that famous resort, it is one of the best known and has been the scene of many entertainments.

HEARING ON PROMOTION OF FIRE LIEUTENANT

Opposition to the confirmation of Lieutenant G. A. Marshall of the Melrose fire department to his promotion to a captaincy, as recommended by Chief Joseph Edwards and Mayor Charles H. Adams, will be given an opportunity to be heard before the protection and license committee at a hearing tomorrow night at City Hall. The hearing will be private.

BAR GERMAN LANGUAGE IN SWAMPSCOTT SCHOOLS

The school committee of Swampscott has forbidden the teaching of the German language in the public schools of that town and an order to that effect has been sent to High School teachers. The Spanish language will be taught in place of that which will be added to the scrap-heap.

COLLEGE MEN'S LIBERAL CLUB FOR BOSTON

To Spread Doctrine of American Thought and Democracy Its Purpose

Amos Pinchot, former Speaker of the House Joseph Walker, Joseph Eastman of the Public Service Commission, John Codman, Robert A. Woods, Edward Chandler and fifty or more other prominent college men, largely from New England, met at the Twentieth Century Club rooms, No. 3 Joy street, to form an intercollegiate Liberal Club, after the recently organized Harvard Liberal Club.

A committee was chosen to draw up a form of confederation and to draft such a constitution and by-laws as are necessary.

It was proposed that the club meet every Wednesday noon for luncheon, but no definite arrangement was made.

The purposes of this new Boston club are not only to assist in liberalizing universities and colleges that have supposedly grown over conservative, but also to discuss national questions, and the spread of doctrines which may work definitely for the spreading of democratic and American ideals as opposed to Prussian forms of government and control.

PINCHOT DISTRUSTFUL.

Amos Pinchot, who represented Yale University, said he had grown distrustful of much that is called education, and somewhat humorously remarked, "It took me more than seven years to get over the effects of my college education." He continued:

"I am not so much of an optimist about the American universities as some, and at one time I thought of writing a book titled, 'Education, Its Cause and Cure.' The real tragedy of education is today its separateness from the common thought of the common people.

Joseph Eastman of the Public Service Commission was made one of the organizing committee. He said he had been trying to think of other liberals from Amherst, but of those he thought of had doubts as to their liberality.

"I believe a club like this one proposed could do an important work. I used to think of colleges as well-springs of new ideas, but I fear they are, rather, the strongholds of conservatism.

"Now is the time for us to get together and do something about it."

Prentiss Murphy, head of the Boston Children's Aid Society, represented Pennsylvania State University, and said that here in the United States we should like to believe that all economic problems would be worked out peacefully between labor and capital. But after a recent decision by the Supreme Court which seemed to discriminate against labor, and other moves which apparently were directed against the freedom of the workingman, he had heard talk of violence. If such extreme methods appear to be the only way, then revolution may come.

The chairman, Joseph Walker, stated that there are 100,000 college liberals in the United States, and that if they could be but organized they could control the college situation in the United States.

EX-CZAR FACING 'INDICTMENT' FOR PLOTS

Big Sensations Promised by Bolsheviki When Alliance With Kaiser Is Shown

By International News Service.

London, June 12.—The forthcoming indictment of the former Czar of Russia by a Bolshevik tribunal promises big sensations, said a Petrograd dispatch to the Daily Express. The Moscow Soviet is busy collecting telegrams which the Czar sent to European monarchs, and it is reported that the autocrat will be charged with entering into a verbal alliance with the Kaiser, at a meeting in Potsdam palace, against France and England.

The latest canard is that the former Czar is at Riga and that the Germans are planning to restore him to power. The Russian bourgeoise, it is reported, are "awaiting the coming of the Romanoff dynasty into power again like a second Messiah."

Two men grumbling over wheat---

THEY were grumbling because they couldn't get all the white bread they wanted.

And as we listened, there floated through our mind the picture of the boys of the 101st Regiment EIGHTY DAYS IN THE TRENCHES WITHOUT A BREAK!

We hope they had plenty of white bread, plenty of pure wheat; if they did they deserved it. But we fear they did not. We fear they had to have war-bread on top of the frightful bombardments, the mud, the rain, the shells, the machine-guns, all at once!

Eighty days in the trenches without relief. Eighty days of hell-fire. And it's a good safe bet that those boys of the 101st Regiment were a lot more cheerful, a lot more contented than the men who grumbled over the bread.

We can all back up the 101st Regiment by USING CORN instead of wheat. Cornmeal is the first of the substitutes to cost LESS than wheat.

Ladies! Salute Him!

Discovers drug that loosens sore, touchy corns so they lift out

A noted Cincinnati chemist discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone, and little quarter ounce bottles can now be obtained from any drug store for a few cents.

You simply apply several drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can just lift it off with the fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! Seems magical. It works like a charm. Millions of women will hereafter keep a little bottle of the wonderful freezone handy and never let a corn ache twice.—Advertisement.

SAY DOCTOR USED GUN TO GET RICH WIDOW'S GEMS

Los Angeles Dentist Accused of Holding Up Rich Woman in Boston Hotel.

Homer arrested for the alleged robbery. Mrs. Wilbur took the witness stand shortly after the trial opened.

Mrs. Wilbur, Mr. Gallagher said, was a woman well past middle age and Dr. Homer was 35 years old. Mrs. Wilbur was a widow, and her late husband, a prominent business man, died ten or fifteen years ago. She made the acquaintance of Dr. Homer in Los Angeles where she was visiting friends. Prior to that time Homer had been known as Williams and had been admitted to the bar.

PRETENDED TO LOVE HER.

Mr. Gallagher said that Homer forced his attentions upon Mrs. Wilbur, and did everything in his power to degrade her among her associates and cause publicity and scandal. He pretended to love her and wanted her to marry him.

After remaining several months in California, Mr. Gallagher continued, Mrs. Wilbur returned to Boston, and he followed her to the Copley-Plaza Hotel, where she had taken rooms, her maid at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

It would be shown that in his intercourse with Mrs. Wilbur, Homer, to carry out his purpose, resorted to shameful methods which he conceived to be the most effective. At times he was a most ardent suitor, at others violent and brutal, and even beating her and blacking her eye on one occasion. She submitted to these indignities because of her association with people of high standing, and bore all kinds of torture, anxiety and distress of mind rather than disclose the true nature of affairs.

On the day of the reception of General Joffre in Boston, Homer got Mrs. Wilbur to go with him to see the parade. When they reached the Hotel Touraine the parade had either passed that point or had not arrived there. Homer took Mrs. Wilbur into the hotel, where he had registered under the name of Williams.

HELD HER UP AT GUN POINT.

They went to his room, and drawing a revolver from his pocket Homer, according to the statement of Mr. Gallagher, compelled Mrs. Wilbur to give over the telephone directions to her maid at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, to bring her jewels to the Touraine. When the maid arrived at the Touraine with the package, Homer met her outside the room and took it from her. Homer also, Mr. Gallagher said, compelled Mrs. Wilbur to write and sign a paper which empowered him to sell the jewels.

That night after leaving the Hotel Touraine, Mrs. Wilbur took steps which later led to the arrest of Homer after he had been indicted for robbery.

SENT HER $2,700 DENTIST BILL.

Mrs. Wilbur told her own story on the witness stand thus:

"I met Mr. Homer in Los Angeles. He treated my teeth and sent a bill for $2,700, which I refused to pay. But I offered to pay any reasonable sum.

"Later I became well acquainted with Dr. Homer. He seemed nice at first.

"One evening he came into my room at a Pasadena hotel and said I had been giving my photographs to other men.

"He knocked me down and called me vile names. When I got up he knocked me down again.

"Two weeks later he came into my room, went through my desk, took and made me sit down in a chair. He tore hold of my arm, wrenched it and up the contents of my desk and accused me of being intimate with many other men.

"Later, at the Hotel Raymond, Pasadena, in January, 1917, I had guests at dinner. Dr. Homer telephoned that he was coming to dine with me. I told him he could not, but he came. Dr. and Mrs. Howard of Los Angeles were my guests. Dr. Homer insisted on going into the dining room with us. I was faint and went to my room for some spirits of ammonia.

COMPLAINED OF OTHER MEN.

"Dr. Homer followed and complained about other men. Then he forced me to go out into the street with him. We boarded a street car. He took me to a hotel to which he said I had been going with my chauffeur.

"He took me to a room. He took my pocketbook and paid for the room. He said I must call up Dr. Raymond and get my baggage and go to Long Beach.

"When I said I would not he knocked me down, threw me on the bed, choked me and slapped me time after time. He tore my dress to shreds. My nose began to bleed. Finally he let me go and put me on a car. I went home alone.

"On April 17, 1917, at the Hotel Maryland in Pasadena, he insisted on my going out with him in an evening gown. I said I must change to street clothes. When I went to my room he came in and said: 'You're going to stay away.'

"He told my maid to put on my hat. He ordered the maid out. I ran into the hall and called for help. He overtook me and choked me and blocked me to stop my yelling. Some other guests took me to the proprietor, who put a guard at my door. One of my eyes was blackened and there were many marks on my body.

DEMANDED MONEY.

"I talked with him the next day on the telephone. He had taken my car without permission. I told him I would have him arrested.

"Later he told me I must give him $800. I said I had no money in the bank, but he said that made no difference. He threatened to beat me and I gave him a check.

"In November, 1916, he gave a dinner at the Hotel Maryland. I was a guest. He told me he wanted to speak to me outside the dining room.

"He forced me into his room, ordered whiskey and closed the transom. He made me sign a letter to Rev. Dr. Davison saying that we had sinned for love.

"He made me give him a power of attorney and sign a statement that I had improper relations with him for a long time. He made me sign a letter in a language that I did not understand. He told me I would be disgraced if I did not."

Mrs. Wilbur added that, when she was in the doctor's room, he made her sign a will giving him all her property without reserve.

FORCED TO SIGN PAPER.

She said that she had detectives accompany her for a fortnight, and that, with their help, she went to Dr. Homer's office, where he put this will and other papers in a grip and burned them. Continuing, she said:

"In January, 1916, I gave him power to sell the jewels which had been taken at the Hotel Touraine. He came into my room at Pasadena at midnight and made me write the letter giving him this power. I didn't know how he got in, but I think he must have had a key. He had a habit of walking in at all hours.

"At this time I gave him my jewels, because he threatened to beat me, but I told him he ought to be in jail and that I would have him arrested. He said he had been pretty near jail, but never got there.

"I took no steps the next day to secure the return of my jewels. Two days later Mr. McFerrin got them back for me."

Whale Steak 'Whale' of a Scheme to Fool Friend Wife

Here's a new way to hold out on friends.

When Mr. Suburbanite is asked to bring a nice sirloin steak instead of buying a sirloin that costs 34 a pound or thereabouts, he gets a whale steak for 25 cents. No one knows the difference but Mr. Suburbanite, who has $2.75 or so to spend for peanuts or to meet the advance in commutation tickets.

Whale steak is not only in the markets at 25 cents a pound, but in the restaurants at 35 cents an order. They say you can't beat it.

Facts Worth Knowing

The first really successful submarine was introduced by the French navy.

The submarine was invented in 1875. The telephone was also invented the same year.

Prescribed originally in 1854 Father John's Medicine is now the family tonic and body builder used in thousands of homes all over the country.

Casualties among the Allies in the present war average about 5 per cent. Among Y. M. C. A. workers at the front the casualties average 9 per cent.

Mrs. Charles M. Briggs of 1044 York Avenue, Pawtucket, R. I., says Father John's Medicine has made her little girl strong and healthy, and she has also given it to her two grown up boys with equal success.

Because of its freedom from dangerous drugs and alcohol Father John's Medicine is safe for young children to take when they need building up in flesh and strength.

He says that all Canadians from eighteen to forty years of age will be taken by draft eventually if they do not enlist.

LENOX WEDDING BELLS FOR MRS. VANDERBILT

Widow of Lusitania Victim Bride of R. T. Baker, U. S. Mint Director

Lenox, June 12.—Mrs. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt, widow of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who was lost in the sinking of the Lusitania, was married today to Raymond T. Baker, Director of the United States Mint, Washington, D. C., at Holmwood, the bride's Summer home here. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Reuben N. Wyman, pastor of the Lenox Congregational Church, in the presence of a few intimate friends and members of both families, to the number of about forty. The arrangements were simple in the extreme. The bride was attended by Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, who was Miss Kathleen Neilsen of Lenox; and by Miss Kathleen Vanderbilt. Senator Key Pittman of Nebraska was best man.

Wedding music, including the Lohengrin processional, to which the bride was ushered in, was played by an orchestra.

A dinner was given on the eve of the wedding to Mrs George W. Baker, mother of the bridegroom; and Captain and Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson, the bride's parents. Other guests included Mrs. John Glenn, Mrs. Cleveland H. Baker, of San Francisco, the bridegroom's sister-in-law; Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt and Mrs. William Douglas Sloan, aunt of the late Mr. Vanderbilt.

After a short honeymoon at the bride's camp on Racquette Lake in the Adirondacks, Mr. and Mrs. Baker will make a trip to the Pacific Coast.

SHERIFF WHITE OF MAINE IS REMOVED

Ousted by Governor's Council for Failure to Enforce Prohibitory Law

Augusta, Me., June 12.—The Governor's council today removed from office E. Herbert White, sheriff of Penobscot county for "not efficiently and faithfully enforcing the prohibitory liquor law."

Governor Milliken is a Republican, White is a Democrat and Arthur L. Thayer, named as White's successor in office, is a Progressive. What the political significance of the removal will be is largely speculation. It is expected, however, to figure in the coming gubernatorial campaign in the Fall.

White is a Bangor man. He was also charged with not efficiently executing lawful processes, but was found not guilty on this count.

The removal was made possible by a constitutional amendment accepted by the people last year, whereby alleged unfaithful sheriffs are made directly responsible to the Governor's Council. This, however, is the first time the provision has been brought into effect.

Thayer's appointment will go to the council for confirmation next Wednesday. He is thirty-five years old and is looked upon by his fellow citizens as radical and an active supporter of the prohibition law.

He was the Progressive candidate for sheriff in 1914. It is said that Fred M. Gates, chief of police in Millinocket, will be his chief liquor deputy.

A hearing was held last Thursday on the charges against White, at which the State was represented by Attorney-General G. H. Sturgis. It was brought out that tons of liquor had been brought into the county and that the prohibition law in the Penobscot valley was practically a dead letter.

IF YOU SEE BOBBY TOWERS, NOTIFY HIS MOTHER

Nine-year-old Bobby Towers and sister Evelyn of Allston. Bobby was taken from her a year ago. She and her little girl are seeking him. They are heart-broken.

Has anyone seen this boy?

His heartbroken mother, Mrs Mary Towers of No. 13 Hano street, Allston, appeals to the AMERICAN for aid in finding him. If anyone has seen or heard of little nine-year-old Robert Eine Towers and will give this information to his mother, a heavy sorrow will be lifted and a lonely heart made glad.

Let everyone who has a child of his own or who loves children—everyone who has any near and dear one, the loss of whom would mean nights of sleepless anguish and days of despair; everyone who can picture the grief of a mother that knows her boy is longing for her and perhaps suffering for her tender care—help in the search for this lost child.

Not only is his mother weeping, longing and praying for his return, but his little sister Evelyn keeps asking for him, and wrings the mother's heart by her childish pleas for her little brother to come home and play with her. A sorrowing home is awaiting the return of the little wanderer, and a world of love goes begging because the object of it cannot be found.

Little Robert disappeared, his mother says, last Summer, and it is only after months of harboring her sorrow that she comes to the AMERICAN with her appeal.

"We were down at City Point," said Mrs Towers, "Robert, Evelyn and I, when my Robert was taken from me by his father. I have since heard that he has been down at Cornwallis, Canada, and have written several letters there, but got no information. My heart is broken, and his little sister Evelyn is asking for him and wants to know why Robert doesn't come home and play with her.

"He was in the second grade in school. He has brown hair and large blue eyes.

"I have seen how many dear ones have been brought together through the wonderful aid of the AMERICAN. Will someone who knows where my boy is please let me know—a heart-broken mother?"

SHOW CARELESS WORK IN VERMONT WRECK

Burlington, Vt., June 12. — That grossly careless methods of railroading were largely responsible for the accident in the North avenue tunnel Wednesday when nine employes of the Central Vermont railroad lost their lives, was brought out at the hearing by the Public Service Commission and two members of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Frank Desaw, a flagman, of the mixed train, said he did not use flags to hold his train at Winooski, waving his hands instead. He said he was requested by phone by Conductor Notemeyer to hold the train ten minutes at Winooski. Desaw testified he told Foster and Andrews, firemen and engineer on his train. They both died in the crash.

DR. HOPKINS TO ASSIST BAKER IN WAR WORK

Washington, June 12.—Secretary Baker has announced the appointment of Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, to be assistant to the Secretary of War in charge of industrial relations.

The naming of Dr. Hopkins to the post formerly held by Felix Frankfurter, recently appointed labor administrator under Secretary of Labor Wilson, met with enthusiastic approval both in official circles and among the representatives of labor. It is generally recognized that in Dr. Hopkins Secretary Baker has named one of the strongest men in his group of advisers.

946 MILLIONS IN RAILWAY BUDGET

McAdoo's Vast Program Again Evidences Extent of War Scheme in the Making

By International News Service.

Washington, June 12.—The total approved budget of expenditures for railways under the control of Director-General McAdoo is $946,296,168, it was announced today. Some of the largest items included in the list are:

Locomotives and freight cars, $296,-994,916.

Passenger cars, $28,340,446.

Other equipment, $12,963,109.

Improvements to existing equipment, $35,942,200.

Total for equipment, $452,417,179.

For construction of extension branches and other new lines, $18,237,424.

Trestles and culverts, $25,025,762.

For additional main tracks, $47,471,-002.

Additional yard tracks and sidings, $59,661,533.

Shop buildings, engine houses and appurtenances, $61,979,576.

SHOWS VAST WAR PROGRAM.

The approving of this enormous expenditure of money on the railroads shows the lengths to which the United States is going in building up the greatest war machine the world has ever seen. Less than $100,000,000 of the total is for work other than that directly connected with war preparation, for over $800,000,000 going for freight improvements designed to accelerate war work.

The following roads are included in the item of extension to existing lines and the construction of branch lines:

Santa Fe, $1,300,000; Baltimore & Ohio, $450,000; Chesapeake & Ohio, $500,000; St. Paul, $642,000; Great Northern, $450,000; Gulf, Mobile & Northern, $940,000; Lehigh & New England, $425,000; Louisville & Nashville, $1,000,000; Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, $800,000; New York, Chicago & St. Louis, $600,000; Pennsylvania Lines (East), $5,500,000; Pennsylvania lines (West), $1,250,000; Southern Pacific in Texas, $1,250,000; Toledo & Ohio, $50,000, and Union Pacific $750,000.

WILL LEAVE SMALL SURPLUS.

Railroad officials stated that these items were authorized for work arranged for when the roads were taken under Federal control. With the steel on hand and ordered, it is believed the roads will be able to make extensions and improvements and leave a small surplus.

For shop buildings and water tanks in the congested eastern districts, a sum of $7,024,937 will be spent. Other items include $31,656,115 for track materials; $6,691,178 for track elevations and $7,784,782 for eliminating grade crossings.

Prefers Prison to War

Davidson has made numerous attempts to evade army service, but they were failures.

"I would rather go to prison than to war," he told the county authorities. He was accommodated.

"My skin is healthy and clear now"

"My skin used to be so dry and scaly. It always looked rough—irritated!

"One of the girls at the office advised me to use this soap—and it certainly has done wonders. It has made my skin so healthy!"

Protect your skin every day keep it clear and lovely

The whole trend of modern hygiene is toward prevention. Authorities advise people to keep their health—to prevent sickness. The complexion, especially, needs daily protection.

Your skin is exposed to the weather—to dust and impurities. Yet it is very delicate, very tender, and covered with thousands of open pores.

Every second of the day, these pores are throwing off excess oils from the system and perspiration acids. Constantly, they are picking up dust and impurities from the air.

To keep the skin clear and healthy, this collection of acids and impurities must be properly cleansed from the pores every day!

Purifies! Cleanses! Protects!

When you wash with Lifebuoy Health Soap, it forms a rich, creamy lather (in any water, hard or soft) that cleanses the skin thoroughly. But that is not all. Lifebuoy contains a most healthful antiseptic. This purifies every pore—counteracts perspiration acids and impurities—leaves the skin refreshed, antiseptically clean. It prevents irritation—keeps the skin healthy.

Begin using Lifebuoy today. See how it keeps your complexion clear—lovely—glowing with health!

The odor tells you why

The "health" odor in Lifebuoy is found in no other soap. It is not a perfume—not the odor of a medicine—but a pure, hygienic odor that tells you instantly why the soap benefits your skin. One whiff of Lifebuoy and you realize why it cleanses so thoroughly—why it purifies and protects — why it improves your skin.

Just try a cake of Lifebuoy—and watch your skin improve!

HAPPY HOOLIGAN STARRED IN NEW FILM COMEDY

Famous Comic Page Character Has Principal Role in "Throwing the Bull"

A clever combination of amusing zoological fact and cartoon comedy is effected in the latest fifteen-minute picture issued by the Educational Film Service Corporation of America. This real comprises an International Film Service black and white comedy, entitled "Throwing the Bull," and a leaf from Professor Raymond L. Ditmar's "Living Book of Nature," entitled "Wild Babies."

In the black and white comedy, of which Happy Hooligan is the principal comedian, the story centres around a blooded cow possessed of the remarkable faculty of yielding condensed milk. Happy, as the custodian of this valuable asset to public welfare, is enveigled from his job by the wiles of a Spanish cigarette girl and, while she is dancing for his edification, the cow is stolen for the ulterior purpose of fortifying the depleted ranks of a number of fighting bulls, against which a company of matadors in a neighboring town is to do battle.

What happened to the cow, and to Happy in his endeavors to effect its return to the more peaceful pursuit of manufacturing condensed milk, is the nucleus of the funniest comedy ever projected on a screen.

Professor Ditmar's depicting of "Wild Babies" shows the evolution of the tiny tadpole into a frog, the training and guarding of the baby porcupines by mamma, the education of infant turtles and how the audad (a rare species of goat) teaches its young to climb. This playful animal lives among the rocks and the sole ambition of the mothers is to make their children mountaineers.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

DEMOCRACY — BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1918. — LIBERTY

SEVENTY-SIXTH PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

Division Put Through Most Gruelling Training at Camp Devens

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, June 12.—The 76th Division is to be a fighting unit. It may be counted upon to live up to all the traditions of New England for nothing at any of the other cantonments in the country has undergone the strenuous training of the men here at the present time. The rough edges of the division have been smoothed by months of hard work and the advanced training has progressed with a rapidity that is amazing to military authorities.

The spirit of the men is one of the division's greatest assets. Details of the valor of the American abroad have made them eager to get into action, and before the end of the Summer the division as a whole is expected to be ready for duty overseas. The people of New England may well be proud of the work that has been accomplished here since the cantonment opened, for their first division of draftees ranks second to none in the country.

MARRYING OFF RAPIDLY.

The division is rapidly becoming a benedict organization. Scores of officers and enlisted men have been married during the last few days and a host of other weddings are scheduled to take place in the near future. Officers are being granted short furloughs under "Exceptional circumstances," and in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred these "Exceptional circumstances" are weddings.

The new rule compelling all officers seeking leave to state where they are going is being strictly adhered to with the result that practically every officer who leaves camp to be married finds his suit cases and other belongings filled with rice, confetti, old shoes or any articles his brother officers may happen to find within reach.

The increased military activity has left the "doughboys" but little time in which to run social affairs or other entertainments for their company funds and many of the funds are sadly depleted. Company I of "Boston's Own" is "broke" and Sergeant "Eddie" Mack and a committee of other enlisted men are planning an international military Jazz Ball that is to be held in the Irvington Street Armory in Boston on June 29 which is the first affair of its kind to be attempted by a soldier organization.

TO FORM COMPANY FUND.

The proceeds of this affair will go to start a new company fund to be used by the men of Company I when they get to France.

The hundred German sailors who were formerly part of the crew of the Kron Prins Wilhelm are helping to raise liberty products on the army farms at Lancaster, Bolton and Still River. They are marched out of their wire stockade to work in the fields every day and, although many of them appear to be contented, the vigilance of the heavily armed guards who patrol the outskirts of the fields is never relaxed. The idea of having interned Germans raising vegetables for them makes a hit with most of the soldiers in camp but all approaches to the enemy alien section of the camp have been shut off even to soldiers.

EDITORIAL

The heavy sentence imposed upon the conscientious objectors at Camp Travis, today, should cause those at Camp Devens to sit up and take notice as it is excellent evidence that the Government has reached the end of its leniency towards those draftees who refuse to co-operate in the present emergency.

The conscientious objectors at Devens have done just what the objectors in the West were sentenced for doing—refusing to wear a uniform and refusing to obey the command of an officer. Twenty of them were tried for subordination, but the trial was postponed pending the determination of their military status in the decision handed down by the Secretary of War.

VERMONT BOY, REPORTED KILLED, FIGHTING AGAIN

Fitzdale, Vt., June 12.—Allen R. Moore, reported as having been killed in action with his twin brother in France on May 10, is still living. His mother has received a letter from him, stating that he was only gassed. He is now fighting again. The two telegrams announcing the death of both her twin boys prostrated Mrs. Moore.

LAWRENCE BOY'S FEET FROZEN IN TRENCHES

Lawrence, June 12.—Private Walter F. Tanguay of No. 18 Willoughby street, and a member of Co. L, 103rd Infantry, is now in a hospital in France, where he has been confined for the past four months as a result of having his feet frozen in the trenches. He is recovering, according to a letter received here by his mother. Before he enlisted he was employed by the Lawrence Gas Company.

LYNN PHYSICIAN WINS COMMISSION IN NAVY

Dr. William G. Ward of No. 150 Essex street, Lynn, a leading surgeon of Essex county, has been commissioned at lieutenant commander in the United States navy. He will have charge of five doctors and fifteen nurses. He is the twenty-fourth doctor from Lynn to enter the service of the United States.

RACE PREJUDICE IS FAST BEING WIPED OUT

Boys Aboard Receiving Ship at Pier Forming Lasting Friendships

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, June 12.—Racial and sectional prejudices are being wiped out in the close comradeship that exists among officers and men on board the Receiving Ship.

A large part of the Reserve officers are drawn from New England and the States of Virginia, North and South Carolina. Many of these are sons and grandsons of men who fought on opposing sides in the Civil War.

Tuesday afternoon Office Secretary Charles E. Lawrence of the ship's Y. M. C. A. was seated on the main deck, watching the ever- varying panorama of the harbor, when a young surgeon, a new arrival on board, approached.

Secretary Lawrence's father played an important part as an officer in the Federal army that operated in Virginia, and was wounded in the service.

The surgeon's father was a student at the Lexington, Va., Military Academy, when the Civil War broke. When the town of Lexington was attacked the commandant of the academy issued arms to all of the students and ordered them to protect the homes of the townsmen. When the fight was over out of more than 100 students only eight were alive. One of these was the surgeon's father.

He then went into the Southern army and was badly wounded while taking part in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg.

When the son, having enlisted in the navy, was ordered North a short time ago, he considered leaving his wife and young child a not greater hardship than having to come to live among the Yankees of Massachusetts.

"But," he told the AMERICAN representative, "the Boston people are the best I ever met. If I get lost in the crooked streets, they do not stop at telling me the way, but they take me by the arm and go with me to show me the path. I am even getting to like Boston's baked beans."

G. G. Roberts, in charge of the ship's insurance office, has put on a new uniform indicating his promotion to the rank of chief yeoman. His office is one of the busiest on the ship, as it has charge of all the complicated arrangements connected with the handling of both insurance and the allotments that are made to families.

A notice from the Bureau of Navigation at Washington has been posted on the ship calling attention to the fact that in the future the ratings of chief special mechanic and special mechanic (first class) will be allowed only on repair ships and tenders.

6,000 BAY STATE MEN WANTED IN WHEAT BELT

Chance of a Lifetime for Men Who Want to Get Back to Nature

By THOMAS F. PHELAN, United States Farm Labor Agent.

Don't be a "tango hound" or a "lounge lizard." Help Uncle Sam win the war; do your bit for the country; become a farmer; settle down and become prosperous; sign up as a farm hand at the United States Employment Service, No. 53 Canal street, Boston, and you can then defy the loafer law, which goes into effect in this State on July 1.

Think of the opportunities open to a successful farmer! It's the easiest thing in the world to become one. You will never regret the step. In the wheat belt, extending from north-central Oklahoma through Kansas into Nebraska and South and North Dakota, at least 30,000 men are needed to harvest the crops. Of this number 6,000 can be used from this State. It's the chance of a life time for men who want to get back to nature and answer the call of the wild.

WHERE MEN ARE WANTED.

Kansas City, Mo., will be the principal gateway for men from the North or East, and all from this State who want to get there should apply to the United States Employment Service, No. 804 Grand avenue, that city. The pay ranges from $4 to $5 a day. Cutting has already started and will become general throughout Kansas by July 1.

Offices in the northern wheat belt where men should apply for work are:

Nebraska — Permanent: County courthouse and No. 1108 Farnum street, Omaha; No. 219 North Nineteenth street, Lincoln; Hastings and North Platte; a temporary office will be opened at Fairbury, Neb.

South Dakota—Permanent, Huron. Temporary, Mitchell, Aberdeen, Sioux Falls and probably Watertown (South Dakota).

The permanent office, located at Sioux City, Ia., will be the principal gateway for men entering the Dakota fields from the South.

North Dakota—Permanent: Fargo. Temporary: Grand Forks, Minot and Jamestown.

WAGES ALL IMPORTANT.

A. L. Barkman, district superintendent at Kansas City, wants AMERICAN readers to know that thousands of men will be needed from outside sources to harvest the crops of the wheat belt of the Central West and he requests this paper to urge such labor as can be spared from Massachusetts to register at Canal street, Boston.

M. J. Burke, in charge of farm labor at the Canal street office, has received so many replies to an announcement which appeared in the AMERICAN calling for an ambitious married couple to run a boarding house for farm hands that he has referred all to the farmer who made the request to make the selection. All who applied by mail will also be considered.

Forty-four young men and boys have been assigned to work on farms in various sections of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont by the farm labor agent of the AMERICAN. As soon as farmers send in more requests for help those whose names are now on the registration list will be cared for. Farmers should be sure to mention the wages they will pay, hours of labor expected to be performed, etc. This is all important. All applicants for farm work want this information before they will sign up for a position.

Plans for securing a supply of women farm workers, for such work as they may be physically able to perform, are being perfected. Women are now placed by the regular employment offices, many of which have special women's divisions in this State.

HARVARD TURNS OVER ONE MORE TO SERVICE

Frank Farkman, who rowed at No. 5 in the victorious Harvard crew, is a full fledged member of the Marine Corps. Linder, No. 3, has applied for admission into the naval aviation service, and Bowen, bow, is waitin g a call to the naval reserves.

Jordan Marsh Company

For the Boys Over There

The two important factors in the welfare of an army are Food and Morale. Uncle Sam attends to the Food for the boys in France; it is the duty and privilege of every one of us to strengthen the Morale—by letters and gifts, to show the soldiers that they aren't forgotten.

Through the London and Paris offices, Jordan Marsh Company has arranged a service to forward money and gifts to the soldiers with the least possible inconvenience to the sender. You can come into our Military Goods section and tell us the articles you wish to send to your soldier. Our agents in London and Paris will purchase them there and send them promptly to the War Zone.

PROMINENT MEN TO ATTEND NAVY DAY CARNIVAL

Patrol Boats to Be Anchored in Basin for Accommodation of Distinguished Guests

U. S. patrol boats of the new 110-foot type, now doing submarine work off the coast, will be anchored in the Charles River Basin on Navy Day, June 29, for the accommodation of the distinguished guests who will be invited to attend the exercises on that day by Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood, commandant of the First Naval District.

The lists of invitations have not been completed, but already the roster includes the Secretary of the Navy, the Governors of the New England States included in the district, U. S. Senators and Representatives from this district, high church officials, college presidents, members of the Legislature, Mayor Peters and others. The publishers of the Boston papers will also be invited to occupy seats on the boats.

These swift U-boat chasers, serving pro tem as yachts, will be anchored along the sides of the Basin making a lane through which the races and other sports will proceed.

New wherries, their paint hardly dry, are now being used on the Charles River by yeomen from the Navy Yard, who are training for the wherry race for women. Lieutenant A. A. Gathemann, in charge of the sports at the Navy Yard, said today that he has had more volunteer crews at the yard than he can possibly handle.

The first crew to go out for practice was composed of Yeoman Margaret McEachern, coxswain; Eunice C. Smith, Madeline Fisher, Jessie Whitehead and Molly E. Grady. They went out on the river off the Navy Yard and made a good showing as they rowed back and forth in the late afternoon between the yard and the North End Pier.

Chief Yeowoman Mae G. Magie at the Little Building says that she feels that the yard yeowomen have put something over as she hasn't yet got her boat and her crew has been practicing with a civilian type of craft. She has been told, however, that by Friday a boat will be ready for the Little Building crew and with the date of the celebration still over two weeks away it is considered that the slight start the Navy Yard has had will not matter.

FILLINGIM DOWN TO TWIRL

Braves Anxious to Get Back at Pirates After Losing 16-Inning Battle

By NICK FLATLEY.

Dana Fillingim, the Braves young star, is Manager Stallings' selection for mound duty against the Pirates in the third game of the series. The youngster was slated to shine for the Braves yesterday, but his good old trusty arm did not feel as well as it should, and he held him over.

Even in defeat the fighting spirit of the Braves sticks out these days. They couldn't lick the Pirates yesterday, but they made them go sixteen chapters before the verdict finally went to the hostiles, 2 to 2.

A little hunt, perpetrated by the little Corsair Caton, gummed up the works in the sixteenth. It was what the initiate call the "squeeze," and it squeezed Mollwitz over the saucer.

It ended quite a hectic pitching battle between Bunny Hearn of here and a husky youth named Roy Sanders of there, meaning Pittsburgh.

Bunny was absolutely unhittable in the early part of the postime, while the same can be said for Sanders toward the close. That being when it counted most, he no doubt deserved to win.

LOT OF WASTED HITS.

The Braves cleuted Sanders safely eleven times, but only one of the blows came after the eighth. The hostiles collected nine regular ones off Hearn. Up to the seventh, when the counting started, Bunn was only hit once.

The game was signalized by some mighty swell music furnished by one of the Camp Devens artillery bands. The occasion was Bat and Ball Fund Day, and in addition to 25 per cent. of the receipts, the Clark Griffith collection was swelled by $125, which the players collected in the stands.

For a time it appeared as though big Edward Konetchy, who won both Red battles, had made it three in a row. Edward, who is on a hitting rampage, poled out a triple to centre in the sixth and knocked off a pair of runs. That was when Hearn was in the invincible mood. In the next chapter, though, three one-shots gave the hostiles a run, and the round following, two more and a fly tied things up.

Then the teams struggled through the bright early evening until that Caton squeeze.

THE SAD BLOW-OFF.

Mollwitz opened the unfortunate stenth with a one-shot. McKechnie tried to suicide, but beat out the bunt. Then Archer performed the necessary sacrifice stunt.

Sanders, who hits the apple right on the nose, so to speak, was passed, mobbing the mattresses. Mister Caton's roller was on the third base side of Hearn, and Mollwitz, with a flying start, easily crossed.

The Braves got Red Smith around to third in their portion, but stubby pinch hitter Conway blazed one at Cutshaw and the curtain fell.

Big Three Hit It Up in Brassard at Beach Saucer Tonight

The staging of the Brassard at the Revere cycle track tonight has made a decided hit with the bike followers, according to Manager Nat Butler, who reports a record advance sale for the big event.

If the riders show the same form they displayed in their earlier starts at the beach oval, the fans are sure to see some fast going.

All three riders, Wiley, Lhiart and Madonna, are well known to local followers of the bike game, and, as they all three have been going at top form, it is not unlikely that new figures will be hung up for the grind.

Spare motors will be on hand in case of a mishap to any of the machines and this will insure the riders against any great loss in the event of an accident.

A well-balanced card of professional and amateur events has also been arranged, including a five-mile open for the money-chasers.

TWILIGHT BALL PROVES A HIT AT BINGHAMTON

BRITTON A WISE RING WORKMAN, SAYS BRITT

By JIMMY BRITT.

Famous California Lightweight, Whose Battles with Battling Nelson, Ad Wolgast and Joe Gans were Among the Greatest Ever Fought in the American Prize Ring.

The twelve-round boxing bout at the Arena between Jack Britton of New York and Bryan Downey of Columbus, Ohio, brought together two battlers of entirely different styles, the cool, calculating ring general, with a good punch and knowing how to place it, and the rugged, battling scrapper, full of youth and vitality, who relied on aggressiveness and luck to put over a winning punch.

As in nine cases out of ten Britton, the man with the knowledge of boxing and ringcraft, was declared the winner after a bout which, while good in spots, furnished few thrills. The fight open up with Downey very aggressive, while Britton seemed content to wait for Downey's leads and counter with right and left uppercuts to body and chin.

Most of Britton's leads either missed or fell short and it looked as though Downey had a fair chance to win. Near the end of the round Britton started the blood flowing from Downey's nose with a left jab.

The crowd booed Britton for hitting low, but the fans were mistaken as all Jack's punches landed fair.

DOWNEY STARTS WELL.

In the second round Downey was again on the aggressive, with leads for body and head, but these were mostly all blocked and Britton contented himself with left and right hand counters, leading only occasionally.

During a mixup near the end of the round, Britton fell out of the ring, but was unhurt although he made some pretense of being injured in order to "kid" Downey into thinking so.

In the next round Downey hit Britton with a straight left on the mouth and Jack opened up and went after him, but a clinch spoiled the rally.

"BOOING" WAS UNDESERVED.

The sixth round was made up of a succession of clinches and Downey's face commenced to show the result of Britton's short jabs, mostly lauded in the clinches and breakaway. There was very little open work.

In the seventh round Britton started pumping left and right uppercuts to Downey's face and jaw, with now and then a left jab for good measure. Downey was missing right and left swings and was slowing up badly.

The round ended with both men trying hard, but Britton had more direction and accuracy to his punches.

Britton started the eighth from the tap of the gong and Downey came back just as willingly, although not as effectively. Britton continued to jab and use a short right hand uppercut, which Downey seemed unable to avoid.

DOWNEY VERY TIRED.

Toward the end of the round Downey was in a weakened condition and the sound of the gong must have been very welcome, for it looked as though it was only a question of time when Britton would send over a finishing punch.

The crowd again jeered Britton in the ninth, but the referee, very wisely, paid no attention to the boos. Britton complained that Downey was using his head as a battering ram.

The tenth round was all Britton's and he was now trying for the final punch. Downey stood up under the terrific fusillade of left jabs and right-hand uppercuts and fought back gamely, but it certainly looked as though he could not go much farther. However, the gong came to his rescue.

ALL OVER: BRITTON WINS.

The last round was largely wasted by Britton, as he knew it was his fight. Downey tried hard and desperately to land a lucky punch, but Britton had the situation well in hand and was content to make Downey miss and then counter him, now and then, making a short rally.

At the end of the bout the referee, very properly, awarded Britton the decision, as Jack had won all the way.

Corbett's Corner

This is the fourteenth of a series of articles which Mr. Corbett is writing concerning the career of the late Frank Gotch, who went to his grave the undefeated heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. The next instalment will appear tomorrow.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

Stanislaus Zzyszko, one of the mightiest wrestlers Poland ever produced, connected with the idea in 1910 that he could master Frank Gotch. And Zbyszko went down to us inglorious a defeat as any great wrestler ever suffered.

On November 23, 1908, Gotch took on the Pole in a handicap match in Buffalo. The champion agreed to throw Zbyszko in one hour but he failed to accomplish his purpose.

The Pole was a man of awesome strength and he was well schooled in the tricks of the game. These two assets stood him in good stead when he was called upon only to save himself from being pinned to the mat within a sixty-minute period.

The fact that he had held off Gotch for an hour influenced Zbyszko and his many followers to believe that he could defeat Gotch in a finish match.

None of that group knew that all the time that Gotch was grappling with the Pole in Buffalo he was studying him—learning his weaknesses and his strength and so storing up knowledge which would come in very useful if a finish match ever was arranged.

BOOMED AS NEW CHAMPION.

The agitation for a match between Gotch and Zbyszko became world-wide. Before the historic match in Buffalo, the Pole had gained a wonderful reputation in Europe and even before he wrestled Gotch in Buffalo he had established himself as a phenom among the American admirers of wrestling.

Through the early part of 1910 the success of Zbyszko continued and on every side it was said:

"There's a man who looks good enough to take the measure of Frank Gotch."

And then Gotch joined the discussion, announcing:

"I will wrestle Zbyszko a finish match, anywhere, any time, any purse."

Articles were signed and the match was put on in the Coliseum in Chicago on June 1, 1910, before one of the hug st crowds that ever "sat in" for a contest between grapplers.

Gotch established a record in that match, which probably will endure for all time, by tossing Zbyszko for the first fall in less than seven seconds.

RECORD TIME FOR FIRST FALL.

In a grappling match the contest starts the very instant that the referee calls "Time." Dick Fleming, who officiated at the Gotch-Zbyszko affair, looked into both corners, saw that the men were ready, called "Time"—and the match was on.

The men advanced to the centre of the ring, clinched—and then it happened! With a lightning move, Gotch grabbed Zbyszko, flopped him to the floor, and by the use of a bar arm and half nelson shoved the shoulders of the mighty Pole to the mat for the first fall, while the crowd sat for a time in dumb amazement over the suddenness of it all—and then burst forth in a furore of mighty cheering.

A newspaper expert, commenting on the achievement of Gotch, had this to say:

"Gotch really won the fall in 4 seconds, although the records officially make it 6 2-5 seconds. It took only four seconds from the call of 'time' for Gotch to pin the shoulders of the Pole to the mat.

POLE PUT UP GREAT BATTLE.

"The referee saw it then, and touched Gotch on the back to signify that he had won the bout. But Gotch either did not feel the touch of Fleming or wanted to make the fall a dead certainty, so he continued holding the Pole pinned to the mat for a trifle more than two seconds longer."

Gotch won the match by pinning Zbyszko for the second fall in 27 minutes and 36 seconds, outclassing Zbyszko in speed, in cunning, in generalship, and even in strength.

Mann and Eddie Collins Land in Fancy Fives; Ruth Takes Flop

Fred Merkle had a good day against the Giants, his old club, and lashed three notches on to his swat average. Hence, he leads in the chase after Larry Doyle.

Red Smith lost eight points in the sixteen-inning battle, but stays in third place. Al Wickland remains fourth, while Leslie Mann, another one of those surprising Cubs, took fifth place away from Hollocher, his playmate.

Look who's in the Fancy Five in the American League—it's nobody else but Eddie Collins. He's fifth, having supplanted Battering Babe Ruth, who fell out of the select list for the first time this season.

George Burns, of the Athletics, in topping the bunch, thirteen points to the good of George Sisler of the House of Jones. Then come Tillie Walker and Frank Baker. The two leading lists:

RED SOX BATTLE HARD TO GET OLD RIVALS

Chicago, June 12.—Even in yesterday's defeat the Red Sox looked good. The tally was 4 to 1 against them, but it was necessary for the Chisox to summon Red Faber from the navy and then he had to be provided with unnatural fielding to be returned a winner.

The Barrows appeared to be on their way in the fifth, when the play that upset the game occurred.

Before the game the White Sox raised their 1917 American League pennant and a thirteen-star red service flag. Jackies from the Great Lakes station participated in the ceremonies, and there were three military and naval bands. Some 12,000 fans saw the game.

The sudden departure of Claude Williams and Byrd Lynn has occupied a lot of attention on the part of baseball authorities here. This young and able battery told Charles Comiskey yesterday that they intended departing for Wilmington, Del., to assist Joe Jackson painting ships for the emergency fleet corporation.

Thereupon the boss of the Sox cast them out of his ball yard and issued a scorching statement that he would have nothing to do with men of draft age who sought refuge in shipyards instead of taking their legitimate chances on the draft. He even had their uniforms removed.

HIST TO HON. BAN.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, declares that he will appeal to Washington because he believes prospective drafted athletes are taking refuge in shipyards to the detriment of the national pastime.

"Just what means will be taken to stop the practice I do not know at this time, but I am going to find out at once the proper course to pursue,"

"Organized baseball has no desire to take refuge in shipyards and we are going to try to stop this practice."

RIVERS GETS DECISION OVER GANS AT ARENA

Joe Rivers, Gloucester middleweight, had Panamint Joe Gans instead of Vic Dahl as an opponent in the semi-final event to the Britton-Downey battle at the Arena. Rivers fooled the latent by outpointing the husky colored lad and gaining Referee Conley's decision at the end of a fairly lively eight-rounder.

Mike Castle of Lawrence remained on his winning streak and stopped Young Sharkey of New Bedford in the fourth round. Mike Snyder of Roxbury and Johnny Fallon of Lawrence put up a rapid six-rounder. A draw verdict, which was proper, was rendered.

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Covington, a rich broker, is devoted to his daughter Beatrice and his son Waverly. Beatrice falls in love with Rodman Daniels whose brother George has just married her cousin Lucy. An adventuress, Fay Hope, visits Covington's office to ask his advice about investments. Her beauty and manner fascinate Covington. Beatrice is too wrapped up in her love for Rodman to notice her father's infatuation. He ceases to go about with his son and thinks only of Fay Hope. She meets her friend, "Lucky" Travers, and they discuss the Covingtons. She introduces Travers as her brother. The father invites them to his daughter's birthday party. Beatrice resents Waverly's suggestion that their father marry again. Fay Hope plans with "Lucky" Travers how to capitalize her acquaintance with Covington, and she and "Lucky" attend Beatrice's party.

THEN she looked up and saw Hubert Jones standing back of Covington. A quick flush mantled her face. Covington thought it was innocent and timorous delight at the thought of meeting his daughter—but Jones, a black frown distorting his features, stood in the doorway staring at the beautiful Fay Hope, and he knew that it was not delight at the thought of meeting Beatrice that brought this strange glimmer to the eyes of a woman he had not once long years before under strange and never-to-be-forgotten circumstances.

Beatrice Covington had a woman's natural instinctive reaction from evil. There was nothing in Fay that Beatrice could identify as actually wrong or wicked, but at sight of her the girl's ming instantly reverted to the sinister creature she had sometimes seen idling up and down Market street after the theatre. So the girl shrank back from the woman in a subtle loathing that she could not explain but that existed all the more strongly because of its very inexplicability.

Covington looked at his daughter in amazement—was his little girl going to be rude to her father's favorite guest? An angry flush mantled the father's face, but he forgot his daughter's coolness in joy over his own friendly attitude when Waverly fairly darted forward, seized Fay's hand eagerly and gave her all the warmth of welcome that had been lacking in Beatrice's manner.

An Invitation

The girl hated herself for her lack of poise, hated herself for the ugly suspicion which had entered into her ming and had caused her to snub the woman her father evidently wanted her to like.

When Lucky Travers was presented to the young Covingtons a flash of admiration lighted his keen, though heavy lidded eyes. The girl was a little beauty, and, by jove, hadn't she snubbed Fay royally—just the right mixture of indifference mingled with the proper graciousness to a guest. It took those little thoroughbreds to put a woman like Fay in her place.

Naturally, a man like Travers did not consider the part that he had played in cresting the place of "a woman like Fay!"

Miss Hope contrived a serene graciousness that was an amazing contrast with Beatrice's manner.

"And this is my brother—Travers Hope—Miss Covington. I hope you and he are going to be as famous friends as your father and I are."

And to himself Covington called Fay a thoroughbred! He registered a vow to tell Beatrice that her manners were a trifle lacking. The child was a bit of a snob and had a way of thinking that anyone who did not belong to a certain group of Prince pioneers in the first family line was beneath her notice. Score one for Fay Hope.

All about in the rooms that were hung with flowers and lights, hearing tribute and paying homage to Beatrice's birthday, there was a confused and gentle murmur that sounded like little more than the rustling of winds in tall grasses. It was the rustling of wind—the wind of gossip, sweeping across the room where Fay Hope by her very presence was rousing the antagonism that women of the society world feel toward women of that half world which undermine their own structure.

Covington felt it. He called it jealousy. The woman who was helping him renew his youth was beautiful and charming, and those jealous cats chose to sputter at her because they didn't happen to know where her grandfather had been when their grandfathers were carrying picks and spades in '49.

"Suppose you come out into the garden with me," suggested Covington. "I want you to see my place."

"Mayn't we look over the house first? I am sure I shall enjoy exploring every nook and cranny where you have been," said Fay infusing the words with all sorts of tender suggestion.

As the group of three left the room there was a murmur of relief among the guests. Waverly darted forward with an exclamation of real interest: "Isn't she lovely, Beat. Did you ever see a more charming woman?"

Beatrice looked at her brother in amazement and then nodded everybody else was watching as she restrained him from following the fair enchantress.

Covington, Fay and "her brother" made a little tour of the house. Then the host found them a cozy nook under the palms and hurried off to search out a few special friends who could be counted on to show Western hospitality to his stranger guests.

A NEW SERIAL OF EAST AND WEST

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

A Story of American Life, in Which the Famous Authoress Surpasses All Her Former Successes

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER I.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

DR. DOUGLAS WADE, aged twenty-eight, most recent arrival among the few physicians of the small town of Riverhill, Wyo., sat in his office reading a letter one Spring afternoon. He read slowly and thoughtfully. The epistle was from his sister, Elizabeth, the only creature in the world belonging to him.

"Thank you so much for the check, dear Douglas," the girl wrote. "I needn't it, for we will have to provide our own costumes for the performance of 'Twelfth Night' which we girls are to give during our commencement week. And costumes mean something to a poor girl like me.

"I am to take the part of Viola. The professor who is coaching us says complimentary things about my acting—insists that I have genuine histrionic ability,' etc. I wish that you had such a flourishing practice that you could afford to run East and see our play. But if you had, you could not afford the time to come. So there you'd have to stick, just as your lack of money makes you stick now. Luck does not consider our financial needs—does it, dear? But I am in the best of luck in having the dandiest brother in the world.

A Grateful Sister

"I have told you often—or tried to tell you—how grateful I am to you for keeping me in college, so I will not try to tell you again now. There never was such another brother. Since mother died, you have been both mother and father to me, Douglas. Some time, in some way, the chance may come for me to try to repay you. You will let me know—won't you?—if there is ever any way in which I can help you? No matter what it is—I will be—Oh, so glad to do it!

"At any rate, in a year more I am coming to Riverhill to keep house for you. That is—unless you marry before then. How about the wealthy widow—the Mrs. Butler of whom you wrote me? You say her son is a nervous wreck, and speak of him as an educated man. So I fancy his mother is too old to have matrimonial designs upon you. What is the matter with her son? You did not tell me.

"I got a letter today from Amos Chapin. He says he is willing to continue running the farm on the same share basis if we will pay for the farm-hand that he has had to hire. If not, instead of half and half, he will ask you to give him two-thirds of the profits. He is surely an old skinflint, and I believe he wants to force us into selling the farm. If his wife was not such a dear good soul, I would want him to be bounced. And yet what would we do without him? I only wish that some up-to-date man, with modern and scientific methods, could be on the farm and give old Amos some hints. But, of course, we could not pay for any such person.

"I hope we won't have to part with the old place. It is the only remnant of our young life that is left to us. And mother loved the farm so much—and she says that father did also.

Well, good-by! Don't forget that if there is any earthly thing I can do to help you, I am right here to do it. Cheer up! Perhaps there will be an epidemic in Riverhill soon, and Dr. Wade will become famous through his many cures.

"Your devoted sister,

"ELIZABETH."

The physician read the letter twice, then thrust it into the ming cabinet holding other letters from the same source. When he had bought this cabinet he had fondly hoped that it would hold the records of the many patients who would flock to him to be cured of various ailments. Where were these anticipated patients?

A Reminiscence.

When the letter was put away, Douglas Wade leaned back in his desk-chair and gazed out over the waters of the North Platte River, sparkling in the sun.

The river flowed at the foot of the sloping streets of the Western settlement, a thriving community that a few years ago had been a cattle town.

The rapid growth of the place had tempted Douglas Wade to come West, assured by friends who "knew" that there was an excellent opening here for a progressive physician.

The building in which Wade had his office was very quiet this afternoon. From the street came the noise of passing vehicles and the hooting of automobile horns. Tiny particles of dust gleamed in the sunlight slanting across to the door of the small room. This room contained no furniture except the hospital table, a desk and two chairs. On the wall above the desk hung a framed diploma from an Eastern university.

The doctor sighed as his eyes fell on this diploma. He always sighed nowadays when he looked at it. For beside it should hang the diploma of a famous French university. He had been studying there when he had received the cable from his sister telling him of his mother's dangerous illness.

He had hurried home to find his mother dead. He also discovered that the money which he had always supposed would keep Elizabeth and himself in comfort had gone, through rash investments.

The Readjustment.

He felt as if he had changed from a mere boy to a man during the few weeks that followed, as he tried to settle his mother's affairs and readjust his ideas of life for himself and his younger sister.

The result of this readjustment was that he was here in Riverhill now, while Elizabeth was in an Eastern college, living on the small sum that he sent her every three months. He realized with a sinking of heart that it was becoming more and more difficult to send the quarterly check. What was he to do?

A fly droned on the window-pane, and Dr. Wade dreamed on. There were his office hours. Where were the hoped-for patients?

They were just where they were every day, he reflected moodily. Except for an occasional accident he did alarmingly little practice.

When would the long lane turn?

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Fortunate Escape

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About two years ago a man twenty years my senior, forty-one years old, proposed marriage to me, which I accepted. At that time his divorce case was pending in the Supreme Court, but he told me everything would be all right, I have waited two years, until finally he received his release from his former marriage.

A few weeks ago I met a mutual friend, and he told me that my sweetheart was married.

BROKEN-HEARTED.

MY DEAR CHILD, what a merciful escape from suffering you are being granted. Please heed all the indications of your case—they actually seem providential. As plainly as if the words were spoken aloud, circumstance is saying to you: "Here is a man who betrayed his first wife—and is now ready to betray the woman for whom he was faithless to her. So he is not likely to be true to any woman. As for me, he has deceived me and lied to me and neglected me and kept me waiting his selfish and unreliable pleasure. He has not been loyal or honorable in his dealings with me as a sweetheart and he has shown that he was not loyal to two other women (though he was married to them—now how can I trust him?"

Give him up—and at once. Even if he got his divorce, how could you bring yourself to marry him? You could not trust him—you could not be happy with him. . . . And probably he is not really planning to keep faith with you. Send him away. Put him out of your life.

Explosions in Tissues

A NEW MUSCULAR MOVEMENT DOCTRINE

The Human Body Compared to an Automobile Enables Dr. Belden to Explain Its Workings

By Brice Belden, M. D.

THE comparison of the human body to an automobile has been made by various physiologists. In the old days it used to be compared with the steam engine. Dr. Crile, of Cleveland, O., worked out an elaborate parallel with the gas engine a few years ago, in which the liver, thyroid gland and other structures were likened in their action to the carburetor, magneto and other functional parts of the automobile.

Dr. Macfie, a Scotch physician, now points out that muscular movement depends upon explosions of the fuel, which of course is an obvious comparison with the internal combustion gas engine. He says that we differ from a motor in three ways—component matter, design and the manner of exploding.

When the cylinder of a motor explodes a certain amount of gas is used up, and this gas cannot be regenerated within the motor. In the case of human beings, however, the muscles are set in motion by an explosion of part of their own substance, and the used-up portion is automatically replaced through the processes of nutrition.

Now this explosion device of our bodies depends upon a sparking system just as in the case of the motor, but whereas in the motor you have to develop a spark at definite times and in definite places in the human body nature has to provide for the instant distribution of the spark to any part of the muscular system at any time. It can readily be seen what a crude makeshift the gas engine is compared with man's body.

The owner of an automobile takes the greatest care in maintaining his car at the maximum of efficiency, and considers most carefully its lubrication, the heat of the engine, the quality of its fuel, the proper working of the ignition system and literally a thousand other things. Yet compare this care of a mere mechanical device with what we see being done to that enormously finer machine, the human body.

People who suffer from neuritis and so-called rheumatic affections, and whose physical troubles are due to disease at the roots or around the sides of their teeth, will frequently neglect themselves, when if it were a mere motor that was concerned they would hike immediately to the nearest repair shop.

The same people who eat trash which simply embarrasses the human system, instead of helping it in its humings, would not think of putting anything but distilled water in the batteries of their cars.

When alcohol is drunk one is doing about the same thing as a workman who commits sabotage. Such a workman puts sand in the machinery of his plant in order to clog the wheels of industry. Nobody commits sabotage against a motor car; we don't pour sulphuric acid into it instead of gasoline.

Alcohol hardens our delicate tissues in such a manner that their functional usefulness is impaired or destroyed.

The human body is the most wonderful of all machines. Embezzage against it is the supreme stupidity.

An Interesting Castle

Carnarvon Castle is probably the most splendid specimen of mediæval architecture existing in Britain. Art and beauty were combined with strength by De Elfreton, the architect, who had been commanded to construct a palace within an impregnable fortress. Whether the mean little passage chamber in which a tower was the birthplace of the infant Prince whom Edward the First made the medium of such a grim practical joke upon the Welsh seems doubtful, but the main story may still be true. Every famous soldier who helped to make history in this corner of Britain has played some part within or without the walls of Carnarvon Castle.

Women in War Work

By ELIZABETH ELLAM

THE following letter has come to me from Providence, and presents a new problem that is worthy of consideration:

Dear Miss Ellam: Kindly write an article on war work positions for girls of sixteen, who have two years' experience in library work, but who are not high school graduates. We cannot get a higher position here because we are not graduates, although we can do any of the work. Will you please tell me where we can find these positions, the necessary qualifications and the salary. The hours of the work will make no difference to us. B. S.

Providence, R. I.

The very fact that you are but sixteen years old is a wonderful asset in your favor, for it proves that while your library training is at present unqualification for war work, you are still sufficiently young to learn almost anything that you put your mind to.

We have one thing to learn and that is this—our present vocations do not qualify us for anything when it comes to applying for war work, unless they include some special qualification of which the government has need. For example, if I was filling out a registration card for the Federal Labor Bureau and was questioned as to my occupation, I would naturally write, "newspaper reporter."

However, the government does not want any newspaper reporters and would have no place to put me. The examiner would then inquire a bit, and then perhaps find out that I was a good typist, or a stenographer or an expert letter writer. He would then know where to classify me.

So—with you—your library training had no place in the governments scheme of work, save that you might possibly be fitted for office work. Here, your age is a bar to Federal service.

My advice to you, then, would be to take up the special thing that you are interested in, and learn it now. It may be that you want a government clerical position—and you say yourself that the hours of work make no difference to you. Very well—then fit yourself to be an expert stenographer and typist in an evening school. Work hard and long, and then take the civil service examination. You can climb into the government service in no other way.

Of course, there is plenty of work in the munitions plants, in the factories and shops where there are war contracts, and if you are interested in these write to the Federal Labor Bureau at No. 120 Federal street for information regarding them. That means factory work with long hours and small pay while learning.

You are still young enough to learn to do something else than the library work that you are now doing—and fourteen is pretty young to "finish and education, don't you think? Most of us never finish—we keep right on learning all the rest of our lives.

Dear Miss Ellam—A girl with a good grammar school education, speaking three languages, and who has done detective work, would like to know if there is any chance to get in the "secret service" or some war work of similar value? Will you tell me where to apply and what qualifications are necessary?

Boston. H. L.

If you will make application to the Secret Service Commission in the Customs House, stating your education, ability and previous experience, it will be all that is necessary. In your letter, ask that it be forwarded to the Department of Justice, in case there is no call there, and enclose your addressed and stamped envelope for immediate reply. I think you will find the position you are looking for, in this manner.

To G. M., Rutland, Vt.—If you will apply either to the Federal Department of Labor at No. 57 Canal street, or to the State Employment Bureau at No. 8 Keeland street, you will find the opportunity you are seeking as a munitions worker. They have the contracts.

Dear Miss Ellam: Will you please tell me if the Western Union teaches telegraphy, and if so, where can I inquire?

MISS M. C. B.

The Western Union does teach telegraphy. Apply to No. 149 Congress street for information on the subject. It is advisable to make application in person, as then arrangements can be made for the lessons.

MOTOR TRUCK TO SOLVE FREIGHT PROBLEM

Possibilities of This Method of Moving Express Unlimited—Has Already Proven Success

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The solution to the freight problem which is confronting every manufacturer in the country is undoubtedly the motor truck. This has been generally accepted by the shrewd business men, but it has not been generally known that it is possible to establish an express line between large cities and carry merchandise by motor much more cheaply than it is possible to ship by freight or express.

C. F. Coe, the local manager of the Chevrolet Company, has proven this by actual experiment. When the delays began to hamper business and it was necessary to get spare parts from the factory in New York city, Mr. Coe started a light express system, sending over one of his cars at regular intervals in order to carry the lighter parts for his stock-room, and a strict tabulation of cost was kept. The service has been in operation about two weeks and has proven not only most satisfactory because of the absolute certainty of delivery on time, but has proven more economical from the standpoint of shipping cost.

This method can be used by numerous merchants who depend upon shipments from New York to Boston or vice-versa, and no doubt return loads could be arranged for with other merchants. The idea is in it's infancy at present, but the possibilities of this method of moving freight and express are practically unlimited.

Young Women—Join the Army of Mercy

You Are Needed in the Hospitals in France—Respond to the Call

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

The Red Cross will soon make an appeal for a large number of young women to go to France as nurses.

The work of the Red Cross nurses behind the lines has been splendid. But there are not enough of them to answer the increasing demands upon their services.

Here is a splendid opportunity for strong, healthy women to do war work which is just as necessary as the war work done by the soldier.

The Red Cross has been built up within a few months into the greatest organization of its kind ever seen in the world.

Men like Henry P. Davison and Colonel William Boyd Thompson, men of great business experience and tremendous business interests, have given their time and their services to making it what it is.

They have succeeded brilliantly.

The great Red Cross drive was heavily over-subscribed.

The problem of where the money is to come from has been met.

As soon as more funds are needed they will be forthcoming, for the patriotic people of the country will never permit this great work to lag for lack of support.

What is needed now is a large number of nurses, and these will be appealed for shortly, with full directions as to the qualifications necessary and the number that will be required.

There is little doubt that the response will be generous.

The women of America have been exactly as patriotic as the men of America since the beginning of the war.

They are engaged in every helpful sort of war work, giving their time, their money and their talents freely to the country.

Those who go to serve the Red Cross will be able to feel that they are volunteering for particularly effective work.

It is said that every doctor behind the lines can save the life of two thousand soldiers.

Certainly every Red Cross nurse in her term of service can bring a thousand or more soldiers back to health and strength.

The Red Cross banner is a splendid banner—one that stands for mercy and kindliness—and one which behind the lines is an emblem of the gratitude of the American people for the soldiers who are fighting to save America from the power of a blatant and cruel autocracy.

It is a banner under which young women should be proud to serve. And the splendid achievements of the Red Cross nurses will go down in history together with the brilliant achievements of our men on the battle field.

We ask all young women who can qualify for this high service to read carefully the forthcoming announcement of the Red Cross, and to volunteer for service if it is possible.

Together the men and women of America are going to play a great, perhaps a deciding, part in the winning of the war.

The women's part will be as important as that of the men, and we know that there will be no slackers among those who are called to the colors.

What Do YOU Think?

A reader offers the following up-to-the-minute problem:

I am up against it. I don't know whether to keep my hat on or take it off in an elevator. When men ran the elevators in this city, if I didn't take my hat off when a lady got in the car I was looked at by other occupants as if I didn't know the first principles of politeness.

Now women are running some of the elevators, and when I got into one the other day and took off my hat because of the presence of the woman operator, other men in the car smiled at me and kept THEIR hats on.

What is the proper thing for me to do and when shall I do it?

PUZZLED.

Well, it depends.

If you think politeness requires the removal of your hat in the presence of a woman in an elevator, then the rule applies whether she is a passenger or an operator. The deference is to the sex, not to the person.

The woman who is operating the elevator may be superior in every way to the passenger lady. She may even have more money, if you make money your gauge of measurement for politeness.

It looks as if you would, if you want to be consistent, have to ride bareheaded in either case.

However, it is apparent from custom that there are those who have other opinions.

It is an interesting social question.

Monographs on less interesting subjects have consumed much deckle-edged paper and expensive ink.

Maybe the women themselves will help solve the problem.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Difficulties Encountered by the Young When Their Ideas and Projects Run Contrary to Those of Their Elders—Case of One Girl and Her Mother

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

I SHOULD like to write a series of articles on "The Difficulties of Being Young." The sorrows and disappointments of youth are so poignant, its rebellions are so intense, its convictions so strongly held. It has yet to learn the wisdom of compromise, the necessity of tolerance, the mitigations of time.

And older people almost universally ignore or belittle youthful woes. To them youth in itself is so wonderful, so beautiful, so full of opportunities that it is impossible for them to see why girls and boys should ever clamor or bewail their lot.

Youth will be served; but not always as much as it deserves. It needs sympathy and understanding, and it doesn't always get good measure in these respects.

I was talking to a girl this Summer, who said: "My mother and I simply don't understand each other and never will. We look at everything in life from a different angle. We have nothing in common. That isn't mother's fault; she thinks as they did in her day, and I'm thinking as we do in mine. That is all there is to it."

Two Writers

"Do you believe that is quite so?" I asked. "You were speaking a moment ago of the two writers, one a man and the other a woman, who most stimulated your intellect and imagination. The man is considerably older than your father; the woman is at least ten years older than your mother. And yet you of the younger generation find yourself perfectly in accord with their ideas and views.

"It is not the differences of age that count. Those can easily be bridged by understanding, if the older generation has held the flexible and open mind and has kept its ideas subject to change, modification or expansion."

"Oh," she burst out bitterly, "I have perfectly clear ideas of what I want to do; but I am constantly thwarted and opposed, and the only reason given is 'I am older than you and know what is best for you.' Mother will not recognize that we are quite different in temperament. It takes her days to make a decision about anything; I make mine in a minute. She likes to have everything done for her; I want to arrange things myself and put them through."

"Suppose," I said, "that you go to your mother and frankly say, 'can't we sit down and discuss this thing like two reasonable human beings, with no tears and no emotionalism, but in a perfectly plain, straightforward way as if we were discussing some one's else affairs? Won't you try at least to see my side? And I'll honestly try to see yours.'"

She replied: "That sort of talk might have some effect on a brick wall, but not on Mother."

And there came that expression on her face that I notice on the faces of many girls when they are in the family circle—that shut-in, repressed look which should have no place on their young features.

Some one said to me a few days ago: "Isn't it too bad about May ——? She was so pretty and bright when she was at college, and now she is almost an invalid. Her father and mother have done everything for her, taken her to Florida and California, and have given her everything that heart could desire. And the worst of it is, that the doctors say it is merely some nervous or imaginary affection, nothing very real."

The doctors had failed to diagnose the case correctly. All that girl needed to restore her health was something to do. Her father was an extremely clever and restless man, the sort of person who could organize and manage a dozen big interests at the same time. If he hadn't given his excessive mental energy its natural outlet, he, too, might have been a bored and listless invalid. And yet he and his wife were doing their best to ruin the life of their adored daughter. If you had told him so, he would have looked at you in amazement and said: "Why, what more can we do for her? She has not a wish ungratified."

It is not of much importance in our lives to have our little wishes gratified—a set of new furs, a beautiful ring, a journey that may delight us for the moment. But it is the big needs of our natures which must be met, or we deslocate, or turn to vinegar, or suffer the bodily ills which are the result of the suppression of our souls' impulses.

This girl did not want to play at doing things. She wanted to go out in the world and put her inherited abilities for organization and construction to the test. She had the stuff for a stiff fight in her, and all she asked was a fair field and no favor. Yet out of their great love for her and the conviction that being older and wiser than she they knew what was best for her, her parents promptly smothered her in cotton wool.

Early Experiences

A woman writer was laughingly recounting some of her earlier experiences. Her mother, who was an ambitious woman, had been deeply disappointed that her daughter was not a shining social success, so she fell in enthusiastically with the girl's plans for a literary career. She arranged a study for her at the top of the house which was sound proof, and where the young writer was never to be disturbed during the hours that she reserved for her work.

But, alas, the mother's interest did not stop there. When the rejections came she went around all day looking so lugubrious that it was pitiful. When a rare acceptance arrived she made a feast, and invited all her friends to tell them the important news.

The girl couldn't write in such an atmosphere, and she simply couldn't make her mother understand why. The poor lady felt injured. She had done everything she could to assist in the development of genius, and now she was accused of clipping its wings so close that it couldn't fly at all.

A War-Time Angelus

By WILLIAM L. DOUGHERTY

Washington proposes a daily Angelus be rung at sundown, calling all patriots to pray for speedy victory for our army in France.—News Item.

LORD, when bells at sundown tolling,
Call our hosts to evening prayer,
Hearken to our souls appealing,
As by hearths in reverence kneeling,
We beseech Thy guide and comfort
For our brothers—over there.
Hark! the Angelus is ringing,
Angels requiems are singing,
As our hearts go marching forward,
With our brothers—over there.

Lord, when bells at evening tolling,
Peal our vesper song of prayer,
We beseech Thy grace unending,
For our heroes brave, defending,
All we hold and prize most holy,
Now in danger—over there.
Hark! the Angelus is ringing,
Birds to sleep their young are singing.
Lord, we thank Thee—Thou hast answered—
Ours the victory through prayer.

NEW SECRETS OF MY OLD MARKET BASKET

By Winifred Black

MR. HOOVER says we ought to stop telephoning and take the basket on our arm and go to market.

Fine idea, Mr. Hoover. I wish I had the basket—and the time. I'd start this very minute. I'd rather go marketing than shopping any day, wouldn't you?

Not too soon after breakfast. I never can get up very much excitement over food when I have just had the last sip of coffee and finished the last delicious bit of bacon, can you? People always seem to me so greedy—when I have just had all I want myself.

But along about 10 o'clock, say, of a nice, breezy, Summer morning, in a nice, cool, crispy linen or gingham—dear me, how smart those ginghams with the bright belt and ties are, to be sure; And a neat little hat and a good, big, broad, deep, high, wide basket—me for the market!

Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, dewberries—which shall I choose? Asparagus, peas, cauliflower? Why, the idea! Any one of these things would be a feast in any other country but this.

Wonderful Varieties

I found out why Ouida's heroes were always peeling a peach when the story opened when I went to England.

They peeled a peach to show that they were real swells and no doubt about it.

No one eats peaches in England but princes and princesses, and maybe a duke now and then, if the market for heiresses has been particularly good.

Once I went to a dinner in England, and when the fruit came on I took a bunch of grapes. I was never invited to that house to dine again.

I discovered that I had committed a crime against etiquette. There was a nice, sharp, perfectly good pair of little scissors in that basket of grapes, and I should have taken those scissors and snipped off two or three grapes and let the footman pass the basket.

Cantaloupes, watermelon, cassabas—no one ever dreams of such things anywhere on earth but us, the rich, free-handed, wasteful, extravagant Americans. Green corn! Who'd think that would be in yet? How white it is, and how green the husks are!

Life's Simple Joys

I'm not going to have mine for dinner. I'm going to save it and build a campfire in the back yard and about ten o'clock, when the moon is shining and the yellow primroses have burst into fragrant bloom, and all the roses are saying "Remember," and all the little, prim, old-fashioned larkspurs and Sweet Williams that the mother, whose voice you have not heard for years taught you to love are saying, "Do not forget; oh, please do not forget," we'll go out to the campfire and dig in the ashes, and take out the corn, roasted in its own husks, and have plenty of butter and salt, and sit around and eat it, and sing, and tell stories, and be friends—not visiting acquaintances, but just plain friends, ready to share each other's troubles and laugh with each other's joys—just for once, in green corn time.

I wonder if we wouldn't get back a little of the old-fashioned home spirit if we'd stop going to bridge parties and fox-trot parties and uplift meetings, and go once in a while to market, as Mr. Hoover suggests.

Asks for Fair Play

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Unmarried men between thirty and forty years of age are certainly as well able to fight as are men of twenty-one. Why shouldn't a few of the former take a hand at defending their country, or is life sweeter to them than to the lads of twenty-one and thereabouts?

I ask what justice is there when three sons are taken from one mother all in a day when nearby a family with three healthy sons on the sunny side of thirty are not called upon at all?

We are fighting for justice and right over there. Why can't we begin right here and now?

A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

RESISTANCE IS RATHER COMPLEX STUDY

By Garrett P. Serviss

"When a military aviator fires at an enemy flying beneath him and the shot, missing the mark, travels downward to the earth, is its velocity, on reaching the earth, greater or less than when it left the muzzle? What effect has the friction of the air? What would be the bullet's speed on reaching the earth if fired in a vacuum?"—J. H.

THE bullet would strike the earth with diminished speed, owing to the air resistance, which would more than suffice to overcome the gain imparted by gravity. If the air were removed, however, the bullet would strike the earth with a greater velocity than it had on leaving the muzzle of the gun.

Let us assume the muzzle velocity to be 2,150 feet per second, and the direction of the shot vertically downward. Then in three seconds the shot would descend 6,450 feet by virtue of the uniform speed derived from the powder, but during those three seconds gravity would be continually increasing the speed at the rate of 32.2 feet per second, so that, with this increase, the total distance traveled in the three seconds would be 6,594.9 feet, of which 144.9 would have been added by gravity.

The speed of the shot at the end of the three seconds would be 2,246 feet per second, gravity having added 96.6 feet during that time. If the fight occupied ten seconds before the bullet struck the ground, the distance traversed would be 23,119 feet, of which 1,610 feet would be due to gravity, and the striking velocity would be 2,472.2 feet per second, 322.2 having been added by gravity.

Mathematics Again

It is perhaps necessary for the sake of clearness to point out why the space traversed under gravity in a given number of seconds differs so widely from the product of that number of seconds multiplied by the velocity gained in each second. For instance, in ten seconds gravity adds 1,610 feet to the distance that the bullet travels, but only 322.2 feet of the velocity per second. The difference arises from the fact that the total distance is obtained by adding together all the spaces traversed in the successive seconds, which spaces continually grow larger because of the increase of speed, while, on the other hand, the total velocity simply represents the gain of speed made in each second multiplied by the number of seconds.

During each second gravity adds 32.2 feet per second to the velocity, and this is entirely independent of any velocity derived by the bullet from the explosive force of the powder. In the first second, then, the speed given to the bullet by gravity increases from 0 feet per second to 32.2 feet per second, and the mean of these two, which is half their sum, or 16.1 feet, is the distance that gravity causes the bullet to travel (in addition, of course, to the distance the powder sends it) during the first second that it acts.

During the second second the speed imparted by gravity increases from 32.2 to 64.4 feet per second, and the mean, 48.3, represents the number of feet traversed, under gravity, in that second.

Air Resistance

Adding this to the 16.1 feet traversed in the first second, we find that the total for the first two seconds is 64.4 feet. Similarly it will be found that in the third second the distance due to gravity is 80.5 feet, and the total for the three seconds, 144.9 feet. But this laborious method of calculation, which I have pursued simply to make clear the underlying principle, can be avoided when we notice that the same result is obtained by simply squaring the number of seconds and multiplying the product by 16.1, the distance traversed in the first second. Thus, if the time is ten seconds, the square of ten, which is 100, multiplied by 16.1, gives us 1,610 feet for the corresponding total distance.

But when the resistance of the air is taken into account the speed of a fast-moving projectile is found to be retarded by that more than it could be increased by gravity if descending vertically.
